MAN IS KILLED, PANIC REIGNS AS TROLLEY RAMS AUTO.

Two Other Men and Three Women Injured in Frightful Charlestown Crash.

CAR HEAVILY LOADED

Arthur W. Myers of Boston Dies at Hospital of Fractured Skull.

COLLISION UNEXPLAINED

Believed That Motorman and Chauffeur Saw Danger Too Late to Stop.

ONE man was killed, two men and three women were injured, and all the passengers of a crowded trolley car thrown into a panic at 9.35 o'clock last night, when a big freight auto truck and the electric crashed head-on, at Joiner and Park streets, Charlestown. The trolley had the front vestibule and every window smashed.

The dead man is Arthur W. Myers, thirty-seven years of age, of No. 51 Beach street, Boston. His skull was broken and he died at the Relief Hospital at 11:25.

The injured are:

Mrs. Mary Campbell of No. 11 Green street, Charlestown, back injured, suffering from nervous shock and face cut. Taken to office of Dr. W. G. Granderson, No. 93 High street, and then removed to her home.

Two other women, slightly injured, taken to their homes in carriages.

John Coxon, eighteen years of age, of No. 51 Beach street, Boston, driver of freight auto and hurled to the ground. Taken to Relief Hospital. Left leg injured and both knees injured.

James J. Hill, of Fremont street, Somerville, riding with Myers on front seat of freight truck. Received bad gash on left side of head.

Cause of Crash Mystery.

The big freight auto, the property of the Motor Transportation Company, No. 9 Atlantic avenue, Boston, was coming from Joiner street into Park street, Charlestown, at about 9:35 o'clock, and was turning around Winner Hill car from Boston, passing toward Sullivan square, crashed into it.

Arthur W. Myers was at the wheel of the auto, while Gustaf A. Olin of Somerset street, Charlestown, was the motorman. Henry Orfin of 47 Lamson street, Medford, was the conductor.

The cause of the collision can never be definitely known. Either Myers and Olin saw the danger of the collision too late to do they were unable to control their cars, for both motorman with a scream had was bound for a long distance.

Then a great calamity—of the trolley was crushed in. Myers was pitched from the seat and fell directly in front of the powerful wheels of the truck, while after the recoil, moved forward and crushed him.

Coxon, standing in the rear of the auto, was hurled to the pavement and passed under the fender of the street car before it could be stopped.

Hill, riding beside Myers, managed to cling to his seat, but his head was badly cut as it was banged against the upright of the truck's top.

Panic in Trolley.

Mr. Mary Campbell was thrown from her seat and violently against the side of the car. She was rendered unconscious for a few minutes, but Dr. Granderson attended her. Two other women received cuts and bruises. They were taken to their homes in carriages.

Panic reigned in the trolley when the electric and the heavy automobile crashed together. The car was crowded with men and women, the majority of the passengers being women. Mingling with the crashing of shivering glass rose the shrieks of the women and the shouts of men, who were equally frightened men. Men and women were thrown down in a confusion of fear and excitement. For a few moments they were panic-stricken, but all injured were soon rescued and the injured women were helped through the broken glass by the other more merciful passengers.

Motorman Olin and Conductor Orfin did everything that they could to quell the panic, and finally were able to assure the passengers.

A large crowd soon gathered and many willing hands helped to rescue Mrs. Campbell from their terrible positions under the car and the wreckage of the motor, others rushed to the relief of the injured and had a startling scene.

After all of the injured had been cared for and sent to the hospitals, physicians, officers in their homes the police began an investigation. Everyone was ordered to remain in place, the demand was in addition to the cars in the car barns for reports.

GIRL SAYS SHE STOLE TO GET GOOD CLOTHES

Declares She Could Not Keep Pace With Companions on $7 a Week.

Brockton, Nov. 7.—Love of the clothing is the reason given by sixteen-year-old Mary Helen McLeod, for stealing between $300 and $400 from the Brockton Shoe Company, in whose retail shop in Main street she was employed as cashier. She was arrested by inspectors Grace and Morey tonight as the shop closed. The girl broke down, the police say, and admitted having been stealing the money for five weeks.

"I could not get anything decent on my salary of $7 a week," she sobbed. "All the other girls had pretty things and I just could not help taking the money."

Miss McLeod boards with friends at No. 308 Forest street.

All Hot Springs Turns Out to Greet the President-Elect

Cheer on Cheer Welcomes William H. Taft and His Wife at Watering Place.

Hot Springs, Va., Nov. 7.—At this Spring-time and balmy-as-midsummer Presidential-elect left Mrs. Taft in their stepped from the car. Cheer upon cheer greeted the couple, who smiled and bowed right and left as the cheering crowds filled the Hotel-de-Luxe grounds, where Mr. Taft will remain for nearly a week, and where he will receive many callers.

The cheering crowds started a welcome will be thrilling of a few seconds ago, but after a calming consideration of the "Hot Springs" air and sun of a Virginia autumn, they began to greet it with.

To-day Mr. Taft rested, and joined in a round of golf and declared an answer to a challenge of a flock of newspaper men, grimly and believes that have been jeering at his golf playing.

The Tafts will stay here until after Thanksgiving.

Catholic Burial to be Denied Violators of Church Marriage Law

New Papal Edict Taken as Another Blow Aimed at the Divorce Evil.

The news received in Boston yesterday by some that the Catholic church had further raised the barriers to marriages between Catholics and non-Catholics by intensifying the penalties if performed by other than the clergy of the church created a great deal of interest.

The official information stated that the Holy Office had decreed that Catholics who are married by non-Catholics by non-Catholic clergymen.

In other words, when a Catholic marries a non-Catholic and neglects the services of a Catholic priest or minister of another religion, that person becomes excommunicated himself and forfeits the privileges of the church, and can be buried by the church in consecrated ground.

The county of Suffolk officials, the Boston archdiocese consists of Bishop Michael Healy, auxiliary bishop; Rev. John B. Peterson of St. John's Seminary, Brighton, chancellor of the archdiocese, and Rev. Wm. A. Splain, D. D., chancellor of the archdiocese, secretary.

None of these clergymen would discuss the latest regulations when the cable said the decree was received in Boston, but it is preferred to await the official transcript of the decision before making any comment upon it.

It was pointed out that the Matrimonial decree of Benedict XIV., which is in force in all dioceses in America, included the matrimonial regulations made with the legislations of the Baltimore Councils of the years 1884 and 1884.

The reported decision is taken as showing the determination of the Roman Catholic Church to give every protection to the sanctity of marriage, and is looked upon by the clergy additional proof that the Catholic Church will do all in its power to check the increase in divorces.

Auto Spark Sets $25,000 Fire Score of Lives Imperilled

Smoke From Blaze in Columbus Avenue Garage Fills Apartments.

Three automobiles nearly ruined the garage of the Frederick E. Randall Company destroyed, several families rescued in great difficulty, were some of the incidents of a $25,000 fire last night at No. 245 Columbus avenue.

About 11:30 p. m. Frederick Randall, Jr., drove a big touring car into the garage. As he set out to leave the car it began to spark and it ignited his coat. The chauffeur was saturated with oil from a leaky tank. It flashed into flames and he had to move like lightning to get it off. He then ran into the street and returned in an alarm.

By the time he got back the entire ground floor was blazing with about 40 gallons of gasoline in the reservoirs of the three floors above.

John Shea and his wife and 11 on the top floor heard Nora, their domestic, pounding on their door and they got out by the rear room found it filled with smoke. Shea ran the child and then went back for his wife. Shea went down the stairway shouting to the other tenants and knocking on the doors.

Several of them seemed dazed by the smoke and the firemen and police had to smash in the doors and drag them from their beds.

Miss Margaret Drury in Suite No. 7 was aroused in this way and taken out in her night clothing. Others were Mrs. Jennie Roach and his five children, ranging from 7 to 20 years of age; Mrs. Emily E. Morrill and wife and J. L. Richie and wife and J. Sullivan and his wife.

Late tonight Mr. Thomas was taken at his home in Roxbury.

The firemen had difficulty to form a fast swimming way, the insides of which were filled with gasoline. Millions of dollars have been invested in America and secured by the galaxy of talent, while the losses have been but $1,000,000 and $152,000,000 from the pockets of the public.

FOOTBALL BOYS FAIL TO STIR UP BOSTON

Last night was the quietest night following a great football victory that the city has known for many years. Only a few policemen were on duty.

At all the evening and 11 o'clock in 30 than 4 with absolutely nothing to do. "This was one of the quietest Thursday evening nights I ever remember," said Captain Cain. "I plainly shows that Harvard students are becoming more conservative in their demonstrations."

There were huge football crowds on the streets, especially Tremont and Boylston. Hundreds of young men strolled along the greater number of them wore Crimson sleeve bands with white "C" on them, the insignia of the defeated Carlisle indians.

200 TONS OF CAMPAIGN LITERATURE SENT OUT

Washington, Nov. 7. An important element in the recent Presidential campaign was the amount of "literature" distributed by both political parties. The government printing office contributed 7,118,500 copies of speeches, which exceeded by over 5,000,000 copies all previous records.

The total weight of campaign speeches printed since the beginning of the sixtieth congress, exceeds 400,000 pounds, or almost fourteen carloads. The printed sheets would completely cover forty-five square acres of ground.

ROOSEVELT'S PLANS FOR HIS FAMOUS HUNTING TRIP COMPLETE.

Will Sail for Africa on March 13 and Start Inland from Mombassa.

TO AVOID THE CONGO

Will Deliver Lectures at Oxford and the Sorbonne in the Spring of 1910.

Washington, Nov. 7.—As soon as William Howard Taft has taken the oath of office as President, Theodore Roosevelt will leave the Capitol grounds and go in the station and take a special train to Oyster Bay.

The President will remain at Oyster Bay from March 4 to March 13, when he will sail for Africa.

President Roosevelt will go accompanied by his son, Kermit, and by two men of science, one of whom will be a doctor. The party will sail from New York March 12 on the North German Lloyd steamer Koenig Albert, which is due to arrive at Naples March 25. The stay in that city will be only a few hours, just long enough for the party to transfer to a German East African steamship.

The party will consist of four in Kilindini Harbor, the port nearest Mombassa.

Starts from Mombassa.

The railroad journey from Mombassa to the Victoria Nyanza, the source of the Albert Nyanza, a distance of 584 miles through a part of the continent that has been opened up only a few years, but nevertheless abounds in game. Rich men and thousands of acres in that part of East Africa are hunting expeditions spends most of his time.

From the time of his arrival until the beginning of April in getting from Mombassa to Khartoum, for the departure time the Roosevelt party will be with Emin Pasha, the German explorer, the frontier post of the Soudan, a stretch of country that, according to the latest official reports, has between 2,000 and 3,000 miles, according to the time he takes for the journey, and remain around between the two points.

Will Steer Clear of Congo.

While the President will go westward from Lake Victoria Nyanza, his wanderings will not lead him to the Congo country. Mr. Roosevelt will be guided by a party of hunters familiar with the game regulations of the British Uganda and Condoforo.

It is expected that five months will be required for that part of the trip, and that the party will arrive in Cairo about May 1, 1910.

Here Mr. Roosevelt is expected join her husband at Khartoum.

The homeward sailing will be done on the voyage down the Nile cannot be told at present, but it is believed that he will go for getting from Khartoum to Cairo. Plans for side trips from there to Jerusalem and other points have not been finally decided upon, but not more than two weeks will be consumed. It is expected that interesting part of the world.

Mr. Roosevelt has agreed to deliver lectures at Oxford and the Sorbonne after the conclusion of his trip in the Spring of 1910. While it is not yet admitted, it is generally believed that Mr. Roosevelt will return from Europe Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt will accept European invitations from royalty that will be issued the minute they manifest a willingness to accept any of them.

HALT $152,000,000 MINING SWINDLE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Nov. 7.—The most stupendous mining fraud ever operated in America, the dupes of which have been Federal Bureau of Investigation Inspector W. S. Mayer, was brought to a sudden halt today by Federal authorities raiding the offices of George W. Evanson & Co. No. 576 Fifth avenue.

Those arrested were Louis A. Pierce and Charles Lafayette Thomas, who are charged with operating a bucket shop. Evanson & Co. of No. 66 Broadway.

Late tonight Pierce and Thomas was taken at his home in Roxbury.

The operations of the concern by which vast swindling was, the members of which are charged with conspiracy to form a part of South America. Millions of dollars have been invested in America and secured by the galaxy of talent, while the losses have been but $1,000,000 and $152,000,000 from the pockets of the public.

RUTH BRYAN TO SUE ARTIST HUSBAND

Denver, Col., Nov. 7. The news that the Bryan-Leavitt wedding is facing an early separation has caused a sensation among the fashionable set in Denver. All the misery which the eldest daughter of the Commoner is undergoing is the result of her marriage to Artist William Howard Leavitt, which took place in Denver, known to her many friends here.

Mrs. Leavitt took a year the fatigue of society and artists in Denver wagged with gossip concerning the domestic infelicity in the Leavitt household. Finally it became known that Mrs. Leavitt, while not denying her trouble with her husband, would not drag her differences with him into the limelight during the world-war National election.

Mrs. Leavitt, it is alleged, will ask for divorce on the technical grounds of non-support.

Fail to Rouse Girl Nine Days Asleep

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Specialists and Hypnotists Baffled

Miss Lavadelle, mental healer, trying to rouse Lucinda Pietlefrom cedar tower.

"IT IS GOD'S WILL." SAYS HER MOTHER

Lowell Young Woman Now in Sixth Trance; Throng Pays Visit to Home.

Lowell, Nov. 7.—Five hundred persons, a hypnotists, psychists, nerve specialists, physicians, church representatives rich and poor, high and low, rich and poor, in vain, to rouse her from her deep sleep or slumber.

Aroused by the publications in the Boston American of the mysterious illness or whatever be the form of the malady which seizes at will upon the young young lady, and Mrs. Marion Pierce of No. 12 Wall street was crowded all day and evening.

It was known by all who came that this was the sixth trance, and each time she fell into it, to rouse her from it was a harder matter. The first time, in June, took but a few hours; the second, in July, required the aid of a physician; the third, one day; the fourth, two days; the fifth, three days, and now the sixth, nine days.

How long the third indulgence, in whose psychological aspects all who came were interested, will last Pierce does not know, and in the presence of a person apparently as unconscious as death.

Try to Save Girl.

They came there to save the girl, if possible, and manage to do anything to their power to rescue her from death. The dread thing that since each recurring trance has grown more profound than the preceding one and this step may prove fatal.

Almost continually, day and night, Mrs. Maxime Lavadelle, a friend of Miss Pierce's daughter's.

"I feel a call," she says to all who question her, "and I must go to her own good and He will awaken her to His good purpose."

More compelling seems to motherly devotion, and the strange thing that of all physicians and nurses who have been in daughter's room during the past week not one has been able to detect the slightest movement of the eyelids or any other indication that the girl was not in a deep sleep.

Miss Lavadelle, a young woman, has been in the room of the sleeping girl and has taken no nourishment, but she seems to have suffered in fact, she seems almost normal and her face is nearly as full as when she was awake.

Miss Lavadelle is a firm believer in the use of suggestion in a case of sleeping girl and while in the room of the sleeping girl made several attempts to awaken her by gently spoken commands of a weak character, but without any signs of possible returning consciousness. She has declared that she will not leave the room in consciousness of her charge is restored to consciousness of her charge or that of the girl herself that her daughter be not disturbed.

Says Girl Won't Die.

"Indeed, Pierce will not die," said Miss Lavadelle to a Boston Sunday American reporter after she left the girl's presence. "I have been in the room of the girl for eight days and has taken no nourishment, but she seems to have suffered in fact, she seems almost normal and her face is nearly as full as when she was awake.

HAVE YOU VOTED? 36 POPULAR SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS TO BE GIVEN FREE TRIPS ABROAD

THOUSANDS OF BALLOTS ENLIVEN GREAT CONTEST

IT'S HAVING rather even day—the BOSTON AMERICAN Free European Tour Contest, in which the public by ballot will decide the thirty-six most popular Sunday School teachers in Boston and suburbs. The leaders are to-day well on toward the quarter mark. The pace is getting fast; new forces are showing every week and the candidates are counting their fighting trim for one of the most spirited ballots any newspaper contest has ever developed in New England.

Miss Helena Tortorella, the popular young candidate of the Church of Our Lady of Pompeii, Boston, who is clinging dimly to first place in District No. 8, has passed the fifty thousand mark in the voting. She is making a whirlwind campaign, backed by a legion of friends who are working zealously for her.

Is Your Favorite in Contest?

In another week perhaps, the one hundred thousand mark will have been reached. Then in District No. 9 at least the real fighting will be on. To the present time many candidates have been withholding votes and making early gains in reserve to strike a rush at a later date, so that it would be well for all present contestants to fortify themselves.

IS YOUR favorite Sunday School teacher entered yet? If so, have you done any thing to help her? If she is not there WHY HAVEN'T YOU ENTERED HER? WHY NOT DO IT TO-DAY?

When the contest ends the four teachers IN EACH DISTRICT who have the largest number of votes will be given a trip as guests of the BOSTON AMERICAN. They will travel in grand style. They will have the best that experience can and money can buy.

The itinerary for the European trip has not been mapped out as yet. Already many votes have been suggested by some of the leading concerns in the field. But the BOSTON AMERICAN WILL ACCEPT ONLY THE BEST THAT CAN BE PROCURED. That means no expense will be spared.

Get a Goal Start Today.

Are YOU a Sunday School teacher?

Wouldn't YOU like to be one of the thirty-six to be included in this grand summer abroad? Then why not enter the contest TO-DAY? A dozen SPECIAL BALLOTS will be given any teacher a good start, and once started, her friends will do the rest.

TRY IT!

LETTERS TELL STRENUOUS CAMPAIGN FOR CANDIDATES

The following letters, received from a great number received during the week, show the great interest being taken in the contest throughout Greater Boston.

As this will hurt me, I would ask that you please accordingly protested, notifying my friends and the public not to patronize same. The matter has been given to the East Boston police station 7. The tickets read "Dances in Winston." Mr. Infinite are Jones 7 Winston, District No. 9.

Sunlight Dancing Party.

Miss Helena Tortorella, leader in District No. 8, will give a sunlight dancing party in aid of her candidacy on Thanksgiving afternoon from 2 to 6 p. m. in Parker Memorial Hall, corner of Berkeley and Appleton streets, Boston. The ballroom will be prettily decorated and there will be some special features as a surprise to the guests. Miss Lillian Tortorella, the candidate's sister, will render several solos. Miss Mary M. Curley will assist in the party on sale at Handels' Restaurant, Castle and Washington streets, opposite the Orpheum, and also at Symonds' Pharmacy, No. 1,007 Washington street.

A white party will be given on Friday next, 13 November 13, for Miss Mary M. Reiter at A. O. H. Hall, Winthrop avenue, Revere. Miss Reiter is a popular candidate in District No. 6.

Employes in the Boston postoffice are taking a active interest in the candidacy of Miss Mary M. Mahoney of No. 192 Hobart avenue, Dorchester, in District No. 9. The young woman is one of the leaders in the St. Peter's School Alumni Association. The Postoffice Clerks' Bulletin of November 4 had the following to say of her candidacy:

"John Mahoney of the Supply Department is to have collecting votes for his daughter, Mary M., who is a candidate in the Boston American Sunday School teachers' contest."

with all the energy in his possession; every enterprise which is within the statutes may proceed without fear of interference from the administration when acting legally; but all interests within the jurisdiction of the Federal Government may expect a rigid enforcement of the laws against dishonest methods.

Seriously, the Indications are already apparent, and the hopes which I entertain are that business communities and the investors, both of foreign nations and among our own people, will take heart in carrying out the great ends which have been projected and that can be carried in a termination if the country is to reach its full meed of prosperity and business activity."

North, East, South and West have all contributed to the national cornucopia which spells the beginning of plenty by Thanksgiving time.

In New York and other big cities it was officially announced yesterday that the General Electric Company will now go ahead with important work involving the expenditure of millions in California. The corporation is expected to close a contract for hydro-electric developments in that State calling for an expenditure of 50,000,000. This is the same sum as that involved in the contract which the Westinghouse Electric Company secured several days ago for electrifying the Pennsylvania railroads into New York.

6,000 ON FULL TIME AT TAUNTON.

Taunton, Nov. 7.—After being on less than half time for all the year, and only three-quarters time since September, the three great mills of the New England Cotton Yarn Company will soon start in full blast, with 6,000 operatives employed.

The Canoe Bottom Mills, closed since last Spring, has already opened up with 150 employes.

The Mason Machine Works, which has been on a four-day schedule for a long time, starts on a five-day basis this coming week, with 400 hands.

The Huber-Hodgman press factory has received shipping orders for machines ordered conditional upon Taft's election. Its press having been shipped yesterday.

The Campbell Press plant has been closed for a year, but has just received orders for four presses, which will give fifty men employment.

20,000 BACK AT WORK IN MANCHESTER.

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 7.—All the great cotton and woolen mills, with their 15,000 operatives, are now running on their full time schedule of 55 hours a week, following two-third time last October and the long shut-down of the Summer. Altogether it is believed that 20,000 hands will, in the next month, be earning full pay.

Additional help has been taken on within the last few weeks and it is expected that more will be added when the Fall rains bring the river back to its normal height, providing water power for the mills to run to their capacity.

Increase of business is reported in the shoe factories, which until lying a corresponding boom in the allied trades, and the boot and shoe factories, counter finishes and other shops where shoe findings are produced are all preparing for a rush of work.

The clear makers are looking forward for a prosperous season. R. C. Sullivan & Son are just increased his plant by the erection of a new factory with a capacity of 400 hands, and it is now coming on for work.

In the serveral needle factories a lot of new help had been taken in. At the Americus locomotive works, the Dutton factory, the hosiery mills and other manufacturing plants, the operators are speaking at the prospect of steady work.

It is expected that the lumbering operations in the state this winter will considerably exceed last year's.

BIG PROVIDENCE INDUSTRIES AWAKEN.

Providence, Nov. 7.—Optimism rules all manufacturing and commercial houses of this city, following the election of Taft. The managers of big concerns like the Corliss Manufacturing Company and the Brown and Sharpe Manufacturing Company assert that business will from now on experience a rapid resumption.

T. W. Foster, of the firm of Theodore Foster & Brother, one of the largest manufacturing jewelry concerns in New England, said: "Our orders are coming in fast. Many which we have been holding subject to election advices have now been ordered shipped at once. This shows that the trade all along feel a return to business.

At the works of the C. B. Cottrell Company, at Westerly, which have been running on half time schedule the last six months, full time, with a full force of hands, is announced. The announcement has been made at the mills of the Lorraine Manufacturing Company. The mill of the Clyde Print Works, River Point, which were running but three days per week, began running overtime this week.

TO BUILD HUGE NEW MILLS AT FALL RIVER.

Fall River, Nov. 7.—Signs of prosperity for Fall River manufacturers loom up big. With the product of the three cotton mills sold up to Jan. 1, manufacturers are now holding off for better prices and are not anxious to take all the orders offered.

Notices have been posted by the Stevens cotton mills announcing that beginning Monday, the carding, spinning and weaving departments are to be operated nights as well as days. The company manufactures cotton cloths and employs 2500 operatives.

The directors of the Sagamore mill decided this week to build a new mill of 80,000 spindles. The Bates Manufacturing Co. manufacturers of twine, is going to build another mill. Every mill in the city is now running full time, where but a couple of months ago they were stopping two and three days a week or running only alternate weeks.

WORKING OVERTIME IN JEWELRY PLANTS.

Attleboro, Nov. 8.—Nearly all of the jewelers in the Attleboros are preparing for the big boom in the near future. R. G. Bigsby, one of the most prominent, states that the result of the election will have a new impetus to the trade and he looks for a most prosperous year, beginning about the middle of next month. Additional help will be required after this time and will be taken on gradually. Mr. Bigsby expects a heavy mail order increase shortly.

Orders that were received for the past several weeks have been subject to cancellation in case of a change in the administration, now that the election is over, will be confirmed.

The G. K. Webster Company, one of the largest here, has a number of hands, and H. Blackinton & Co. the F. M. Whitney Company and Macullan & Hawkes have all begun to give out overtime work.

MORE MILLS ARE RISING AT LAWRENCE.

Lawrence, Nov. 7.—Industrial conditions in this city have been improving and the indications are that Lawrence will soon be in as prosperous a condition as she was before the depression struck the city. The Arlington mill, with its vast working population, where many looms have been idle for months, shows signs of new life.

At the Lower Pacific, the main mill between the Merrimac river and the canal is being extended. When this work is completed more machinery will be added and more help will be hired.

The Atlantic mill has built a large weave shed and new looms have been installed. The American Woolen Company, which owns the Wood, Washington and Prospect mills, is making improvements, and in many of the departments the employees are getting a great deal of overtime work.

Plans have been prepared for the building of two large mills in addition to the already large plant of the Everett mill.

STEEL TRUST PLANT WORKS NIGHT AND DAY.

Worcester, Nov. 7.—The Worcester machinery industry, already in prosperous conditions, and a gradual resumption of activity during the winter, with a big boom next spring, is looked for. The American Steel & Wire Company, a subsidiary of the Steel Trust, which employs more than any other half dozen enterprises in the city, began a month ago to put on its night force because of improved business conditions and increasing orders. About 3,000 hands are regularly employed and probably several hundred more will be taken on.

The Crompton and Knowles loom works has slowly been resuming full time, and will soon be in active effect to have the full complement of men at work on a full time basis.

The Worcester Machine Screw Co. and other local concerns have practically gone back on a full time schedule and expect to be in full swing by the first of the year.

The American Woolen Company, which controls many of the mills down the valley, has been purchasing wool for several weeks, anticipating higher prices after the election and Wednesday morning, when the election of Taft was positively assured, local woolen manufacturers left this city in quest of supplies.

RUSH OF ORDERS HITS NEW HAVEN.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 7.—Shoe election the largest Hartmere Company, employing 4,000 hands have extended hours from 50 to 60 per week. The New Haven Clock Company, employing 1,500 hands has taken on 200 more hands and reports several large orders. The National Folding Paper Box Company reports so many new orders that 100 hands have been engaged this week.

COTTON FACTORY HEADS OPTIMISTIC.

New Bedford, Nov. 7.—New Bedford cotton manufacturers hope to start all the machinery on full time before the end of the year. Thus far none of the mills have resumed the full schedule of hours.

The manufacturers are confronted with an unusual situation with respect to the wage schedule, and it may be that a reduction will be necessary next month, due to the difference between the Fall River and New Bedford scales.

BIG ORDERS, FULL TIME AT LACONIA.

Franklin, N. H., Nov. 7.—The Sulloway hosiery plant will be running full time by Jan. 1, with 700 employed, 200 more than the present complement. The Mayo Knitting Machine & Needle Company is now running on full time, with 200 hands, employed, as is the George W. Griffin Company, new makers. The William Chow Sons Company's hosiery works at Laconia will be started on full time for 200 workers at once. Big orders and full hours are predicted at the Laconia car shops. At Hill brisk business is anticipated at the Adams Needle Works and the New England Novelty plant. The Hamo shoe at Andover is running full time again with the employees.

LOWELL FACTORIES TO RUN FULL BLAST.

Lowell, Nov. 7.—The Merrimack Manufacturing company, which gives employment to about 4,000 people, is now running its print department on full time, and will gradually resume a full time schedule for the cotton department, which at the present time is running about two-thirds of its machinery.

All indications point to a return to normal conditions within a brief time, said Agent Jude C. Wadleigh.

The Lowell shoe shop, which has been badly crippled, is gradually getting its old forces of shoe back to work. This concern cut down to 1000.

The Lowell Shoe Company, employing several hundred hands, has announced that it will resume operations with a full force of help on Monday morning.

Fitting's Shoe Factory will continue to work full time, and will build a new shop within a short time.

CLOSED TEN YEARS MILLS ARE REOPENED.

Whitehall, Ct., Nov. 7.—The Greenwood Cotton Mills, which were closed down a decade ago, are to be reopened, and the interests of New Hartford, where the mills are located, are rejoicing. The closing of the mill reduced the population of the community from 2,000 to 1,000. The New Haven road is replacing tracks to the abandoned mill.

The William L. Gilbert Clock Company, one of the largest industrial concerns, has started to operate its factories until 9 o'clock at night. They have been working short time since last June. The Seth Thomas Clock Company of Thomaston, has lengthened its working week from four to five and a half days.

READVILLE CAR SHOPS FEEL IT.

Readville, Nov. 7.—The men employed in the big locomotive shops of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, numbering 1,800, started on full time today. They have been working five days a week on the average, but of times during the past Summer had only four days.

LUMBER SITUATION IS MUCH IMPROVED.

Bangor, Me., Nov. 7.—The lumber situation has begun to improve already and the prices paid for logs are $1 per 1000 feet better than it was last summer. This is encouraged the lumbermen that it is likely that a full cut will be made this season and it had been intended to curtail 25 per cent.

To-day there is more a mechanic loading in Bangor. All kinds of common labor, a scarcity, is in demand at $2 a day. Help is also in demand; the pulp mill strikes seems to be settled and goods are recovering their lost trade; the crops are generally good and cash is plentiful.

CONCORD RAILROAD SHOPS TO RESUME.

Concord, N. H., Nov. 7.—The revival of business in this section is well under way. In the granite industry, the principal one in this city, all the manufacturers are now working full gangs of men and the output is the largest for all Winter, which will be something unusual.

The Concord Carriage Company, which has been running only two days in a week for the past year, has announced that it will resume five days and expect to go on full time very soon.

WAKEFIELD MILLS ON 6-DAY BASIS.

Wakefield, Nov. 7.—The Harvard knitting mills of this town have just entered on a six days' schedule after running on a five days' schedule for the past several months. The mills manufacture hosiery and underwear, and employ about 500 hands.

ELECTION HELPS MARBLE BUSINESS.

Rutland, Vt., Nov. 7.—The F. R. Patch Manufacturing Company, manufacturers of stone working machinery, have received inquiries about new business, which pinged on the election of Taft. An official of the Vermont Marble Company, which operates big plants and quarries at West Rutland and Proctor, said to-day that his concern was pleased at the election of Taft and was confident that there would soon be an increase in the demand for marble for building. The Howe Scale Company, the largest industrial plant in this city, is running only three days a week, but the management is confident that it will soon be able to go back to full time.

BUSINESS REVIVES THROUGH VERMONT.

Burlington, Vt., Nov. 8.—Business here has revived considerably since the election of Taft and there is an easier feeling than for some time among merchants and wholesalers in Vermont. The large retail houses closed down for a week or more at this time during the Summer, but has been different with them this year. They have had many many large orders that were held back pending upon one condition, the election of Taft.

DOUGLAS FACTORY INCREASES FORCE.

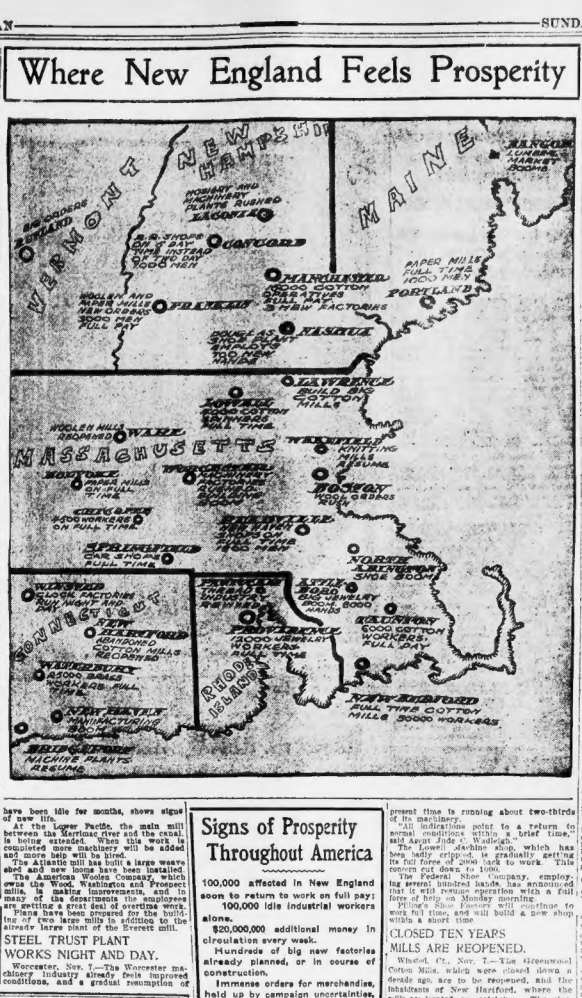
Nashua, N. H., Nov. 7.—The W. D. Douglas factories, which are owned by the W. L. Douglas interests, will increase its force by 700, as soon as the machinery can be installed, making a total of 1,500 operatives employed.

BIG PAPER MILLS START UP IN MAINE

Portland, Nov. 7.—The paper and cotton goods industries have begun to feel the stimulus of the election result. The mills of the International Paper Company at Rumford Falls, and the mills of the Androscoggin company have started on full time and orders have piled in during the past few days that full time for months ahead is assured.

The mills of the International Paper Company at Livermore Falls closed for weeks through lack of water, started up Monday with a full complement of men and with much orders. The cotton goods industry has taken a boom and orders, held in abeyance for months, will be rushed to fulfillment.

Where New England Feels Prosperity



Signs of Prosperity Throughout America

100,000 affected in New England soon to return to work on full pay!

100,000 idle industrial workers alone.

$20,000,000 additional money in circulation every week.

Hundreds of big new factories already planned, or in course of construction.

Immense orders for merchandise, held up by campaign uncertainties, released after Taft victory.

Railroad shops all over America started on full time, preparing for vast increase in freight and passenger traffic.

Big boom already begun in cotton, machinery, jewelry, woolen, rubber and brass industries of New England.

ALIENISTS DECLARE CAPT. HAINS INSANE

Experts Examine Slayer of Annis for Evidence in Fight to Delay Trial.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Nov. 7.—Captain Peter C. Hains, Jr., awaiting trial for killing William C. Annis, was pronounced insane today by three alienists. They said it would be impossible for him to figure either as a defendant or as a witness for his brother, Lieutenant Hains, for at least three or four months.

District Attorney Darrin of Queens, spent the entire day examining witnesses for the Hains case. Chief among these was Mrs. William C. Annis, wife of the man slain by Captain Peter C. Hains.

The district attorney conducted all of the work at the Bayside Lacht Club, in the very shadow of the tragedy. The Annis home has been closed since the time that Mrs. Annis left the Bayside shore for her refined last summer.

Only a personal host who was said to be her brother.

At the time Mr. Darrin was examining Mrs. Annis, Dr. L. S. Mansen and other alienists arrived by the defense. They were examining Captain Peter C. Hains, Jr., as to his sanity.

The alienists' testimony will figure in the fight of the defense for delay.

A NEW TRIUMPH SCORED FOR WIRELESS SIGNALS

Messages Are Sent 1,200 Miles Over High Mountain Ranges.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 7.—Advices received at the local signal office show that the signal service wireless stations in Alaska have made another record, reporting all doubt as to the feasibility of sending wireless messages overland. Fort Gibbon, at the junction of the Yukon and Tanana rivers, several hundred miles inland, is receiving messages from Nome and St. Michael, 500 miles distant, with many ranges of mountains between. The record is a message sent by the steamer Northwestern, 1,100 miles west of Cape Flattery, to the United Wireless Station at Point Grey, in Canada. The message traversed about 1,200 miles in an air line over two high ranges of mountains capped with snow.

PRESIDENT HARD AT WORK ON MESSAGE

Last Communication to Congress to Contain Important Recommendations.

Washington, Nov. 7.—President Roosevelt's last annual message to Congress will be of the nature of a swan-song.

The President has never given the attention to the preparation to a message that he has devoted to this one. Rough drafted while he was at Oyster Bay for the Summer, and supplemented since his return by important departmental recommendations, he is still at work amending and polishing it.

It will pay considerable attention to questions of economic policies in which he is interested. One of the most striking features will be the recommendation of an amendment to the Sherman anti-trust law exempting labor organizations from its provisions and the passage of such an amendment to the laws opposed last year.

Fight for Larger Navy.

Whether the President will push his fight for a larger navy by recommending the annual construction of four monster battleships has not been decided. He will act upon that also before long.

Additional fortifications in the Philippines and seacoast defenses at home will be urged. Congress will be asked to broaden the powers of the interstate commerce commission in the supervision of rates before they become effective. The postal savings bank project of the Postmaster General will receive hearty indorsement.

The great growth of Prohibition sentiment and the demand of the States that the Federal Government meet the "original package" decision of the Supreme Court will be touched upon.

Campaign Expenses Publicity.

The President will also recommend legislation requiring publicity of campaign expenses. He will press for a Federal incorporation law and the enactment of a new employers' liability law.

The demand for uniformity in divorce laws will be reiterated, as well as national child labor legislation.

Although it is generally understood that the President will leave to his successor the treatment of tariff revision, the desirability of placing wood pulp on the free list will again be pointed out.

KERMIT HAS JOLLY TIME WITH SAILORS

President's Son Helps Entertain the Tars by Night at Haven In Charlestown.

CHIP OF THE "BIG STICK"

If Jackies Get Boisterous He Is Supposed to Preserve Order.

Kermit Roosevelt, in the first flush of his freshman year at Harvard, is proving himself a chip of the "Big Stick."

Volunteering with other collegians to assist in entertaining the seamen at the Sailors' Haven in Charlestown, he was speedily approved by Superintendent Brannon H. King, and has just been assigned, among other duties, to stand at the door where the sailors come in, usher them to their seats and help keep order. This Kermit is already displaying, even in this kindly work, the inborn traits of his distinguished father for running things.

There is no difficulty, of course, in maintaining order at the Sailors' Haven, for the sailors, guests are well-behaved. But, in case any confusion arises at the opening exercises or in greeting the sailors, Kermit Roosevelt is right on hand to straighten matters out.

Proves Good Fellow.

Since taking up this work Kermit has been quoted as saying:

"I believe every man in college should put into charitable work of something of that nature, no matter how busy he may be.

At the opening of the term Kermit was greeted by his classmate, R. Clifford, a nephew of J. Pierpont Morgan, to help out at the Sailors' Haven, one night each week. Some of the Episcopal societies should be in charge of the exercises, Kermit suggested. He was introduced to Superintendent King. He talked with the sailors, played chess and checkers with them and made himself a good fellow. Many a tar who chatted with the tall, slender, darkhaired young chap there little suspected he was a son of President Roosevelt.

On Regular Staff.

Kermit went to the Haven three times and was asked by Superintendent King to become a regular member of the collegiate assisting staff.

Buns and coffee were passed around among the college boys. The sailors return the hospitality by demonstrating on a small mast and sails rigged on the stage how sails are hoisted, lowered and reefed.

To-morrow night Kermit will be over at the Haven with people from St. Paul's Church, who have the evening's programme in charge.

MONTANA VOTE CLOSE.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 7.—An official count of the ballots cast for Governor will be needed to determine the successful candidate. With 175 precincts missing Norris, Democrat, leads Donlan, Republican, by 1,200 plurality.

TO MUZZLE ALL DOGS AFTER TODAY

Mayor Hibbard Orders Three-Months' Guarantine to Stop Rabies.

The new "muzzle" order, affecting the 18,000 licensed dogs in Boston, was signed yesterday by Mayor Hibard. It will be in effect for three months. To-morrow every dog owner will be notified of the order by a patrolman.

The order provides that "all dogs in the city of Boston shall be muzzled when on the street for the next three months."

Fear of rabies is back of the order. Health Commissioner John Dixon says reports that within the past two days four cases of persons bitten by dogs have been reported.

The Health Board has placed many dogs in quarantine for observation. It also has the heads of several dogs under examination for hydrophobia. Two deaths from hydrophobia occured recently. In the period of the last three weeks nine cases of rabies were reported.

DRIFT 14 HOURS IN FREEZING WEATHER

Crew of Foundered Schooner Have Tough Experience After Abandoning Vessel.

Fourteen hours in an open boat, with the thermometer six degrees below the freezing point, was the experience of Captain Simeon Simons, Mate Cotter and Seamen Hibbert, Carlson and Joseph Riordan of the three-masted schooner James A. Hamlin of Thomaston, Me., which was struck by a gale last Thursday night and sunk 400 miles off Chatham's hook. The men were brought into Boston yesterday by the fishing schooner Hannah.

As the forewarned of evil the cook of the boat had leaped overboard when the ship was sailing out of Portland harbor.

NO DECREASE IN SOUTHERN QUOTA

Richmond, Va., Nov. 7.—Wyndham R. Meredith, former president of the Bar Association, to-day made public a communication from President Roosevelt, under date of October 27, in which the executive declares that no one believes any attempt will be made to decrease the representation of the South in Congress.

WIFE HUNTS SISTER IN DIVORCE SUIT

Mrs. De Lana E. Bishop Charges Husband Tried to Force Her to Leave Home.

SAYS BABIES WENT HUNGRY

Pantry Door Kept Locked, With Domestic In Charge, Declares Cambridge Woman.

Mrs. Eva S. Froelich, who has been named by Mrs. De Lana E. Bishop of Cambridge, her own sister, in the divorce suit which Mrs. Bishop has brought against her husband, Charles S. Bishop, the wealthy real estate dealer and publisher, is being hunted everywhere by detectives in the employ of the wife.

Where Mrs. Bishop's sister is the detectives have, so far, been unable to determine. Her last address was Groton, Ct., where she went with her two pretty children, Olga, aged 7, and Dana, aged 9, when Mrs. Bishop drove her from her home, No. 1473 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge. Mrs. Stone, mother of Mrs. Froelich and Mrs. Bishop lives in Groton.

Detectives Fail to Find Her.

Detectives for Mrs. Bishop have found that Mrs. Froelich lived with her mother a short time in the early summer and then went away with her children. Mrs. Froelich has not lived with her husband for several years.

The trial of the divorce suit which Mrs. Bishop is bringing against her husband promises to be remarkable because of the allegations which the petitioner makes against her husband, who is a well-known business man and who is the author of "Professor Joel Prentiss Bishop, an authority on the marriage and divorce laws and the author of several books on this subject which are now published in connection with the case.

Mrs. Bishop has named her own sister as breaking up her home. She claims she is practically a prisoner in her own house and that a servant is the real mistress. She has charged that her husband will not give her any money and that he placed padlocks on the doors to the pantry and several other rooms in the house. She claimed that he refused to furnish sufficient heat for herself and her children.

Mrs. Bishop was given the temporary custody of the children by the court. She lives under the same roof with her husband and takes care of her meals at the same table with him. The Bishops have three children, Andrew, three years and eight months, Richard, two and one-half years, and Charles, eight months.

Of Indian Blood.

"The Indian is proud of his ancestors, which courses in my veins, spurs me to ring this suit against my husband and the same may be said of my sister," Mrs. Bishop yesterday to a Boston American reporter. "I am sorry for my sister's two children. Even the baby, Dana Winslow, a little lamb, near Inclesion, in this state.

Mrs. Nichols has many times refused to marry Blood, objecting mainly to his last name. Last night, infuriated at her continued refusals he locked her back in the stable and stabbed the woman seriously ten times.

BUSY WEEK FOR RABBI FLEISCHER

Rabbi Fleischer of Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue, has a strenuous week ahead of him, for he is scheduled to deliver addresses in three States in four days. Wednesday evening he will speak in Taunton, N. H.; Thursday evening, Milford, N. H.; Friday afternoon, Winchendon, Mass.; Saturday and Sunday mornings he will occupy the pulpit of Rabbi Maurice H. Harris of Temple Israel, Harlem, New York.

OLD TIME NEWS WRITERS AT FEAST

Old time newspaper men last night attended the banquet at Young's Hotel of the newly formed Ancient Journalists' Club of Boston and were entertained by speeches by Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara, Secretary of State William C. Olin, General Charles H. Taylor, John W. Ryan, J. W. Perkins, H. N. Batchelder, W. Palmer and W. H. Sumner. John Boyd Porter presided. The club is composed of 150 members, all of whom have worked at the newspaper business either as editors, reporters, or desk men. One of the oldest newspaper men at the banquet was S. F. Niles, who is stone blind. He worked at the business in 1848. Rev. Edward Everett Hale, another member, was unable to be present.

EDWIN V. SKINNER DIES SUDDENLY

Yonkers, N. Y., Nov. 7.—Edwin V. Skinner, general passenger agent of the Canadian Pacific Railroad and one of the best known railroad men in America, died suddenly from apoplexy at his home, No. 3 Phillips place, here early this evening.

NEW PHONE RULES STIR HELLO GIRLS

Young Women Declare Company Employes "Spotters" to Spy on Them.

There is a great deal of excitement in the ranks of the Boston "belle" girls owing to the statements that they are subjected to espionage by the telephone company out of office hours and because one who has been dismissed is said to have expressed the opinion that she really owes her discharge to the fact that she was one of sorry, said to number fifteen, of associates, who toured Chinatown.

It is said that this party, which was chaperoned, left the main exchange on the 13th street at 11 o'clock at night, when he first shift went off duty, and visited Chinese restaurants and ate chop suey and other Mongolian triumphs in cuisine. Others there were in the party are wondering if they have sufficiently incurred the displeasure of the night manager to cause their discharge.

The telephone officials admit having knowledge of the chinatown party, but say that the girl who was dismissed did not lose her position because she was a member of it. They say her services were not satisfactory.

The young woman says her service was to be rated by inspectors and it gave no reason for her receiving a notice to leave.

A notice recently posted in the operating room, the girls declare, informs them that the company will not sanction their being met by an escort when they leave the exchange. The penalty of disobedience is dismissal they say.

59 INDICTMENTS BY GRAND JURY

Chelsea Contractors to Be Arraigned for Manslaughter In Building Collapse.

Morris Gordon and Morris Segal, the Chelsea contractors who were erecting the building which collapsed in Chelsea last Summer and killed eight men, were indicted for manslaughter by the Middlesex Grand Jury yesterday. Both men are out on bail. They will be called in to plead to the indictments when the cases come to trial.

The Grand Jury returned fifty-nine indictments and twenty-two "no bills."

Joseph Mecca and William S. Duncan were indicted for highway robbers of Edward J. Jenkins, Hotel Touraine checker, in Edward Everett Square. Gertrude Kiely and Loretta McCarthy were indicted with them on another charge.

William Devine, charged with being the youth who set fire to his horses in Chelsea after saturating the animals with kerosene, was indicted for arson.

In the case of a charge made against Benjamin Cohen, that he stuffed cotton of Winthrop, a "no bill" was returned.

CARROLL WOULD BE SPRINGFIELD MAYOR

Springfield, Nov. 7.—James B. Carroll, one of the most prominent Democrats in Massachusetts, announced to-day that he would run for Mayor on the Democratic ticket if the nomination was tendered him. Owing to the opposition which has arisen to Mayor William E. Sanderson having another term it is believed Mr. Carroll will be elected, though Springfield is a strong Republican city. Mr. Carroll ran for Lieutenant-Governor on the ticket with the late William E. Russell, but was defeated by a small margin.

HUB SOCIETY GIRL WED IN VALPARAISO

Goes to South America to Marry After Quiet Engagement of Six Months.

Miss Ida Paulina Parker, a beautiful Back Bay society girl and daughter of Mrs. G. Foster Williams, of No. 314 Beacon street, was married to Howard Parker of New York in Valparaiso Thursday, where the young lady recently went with mutual friends of the two families after a quiet engagement of six months. Mr. Howard was unable to leave his business of three years' standing in Valparaiso long enough to come north and hold the wedding at home.

Howard Parker and his mother have lived in New York for twenty years since the death of his father, and Mrs. Parker and Mrs. Williams were almost lifelong friends. The families visiting each other frequently, so Parker and Miss Williams had been thrown together from infancy, until it became long ago settled fact that they would some day marry.

GEN. WESTON TO QUIT PHILIPPINES POST

Washington, Nov. 7.—The War Department has been advised by Major-General John P. Weston, in command of the army in the Philippines, that ill health will shortly force his retirement. Among those mentioned as likely to be advanced are Major-General W. P. Duvall, assistant chief of staff; Major-General Henry T. Barry, commanding the army of Cuban pacification, Major-General P. D. Grant, commanding the department of the East, and Brig.-General F. C. Ainsworth, adjutant-general.

TALKS ON TEETH

By Dr. E. Gordon Martin

Why YOU Should Write Us Today!

Anyone, anywhere in New England, who has any trouble with their teeth should know about Alveolar Dentistry.

Teeth troubles won't wait. Left to themselves they always grow worse. There is no worse pain than toothache. Ulcerated teeth necessitate lancing, and that's not pleasant. Decayed and missing teeth are unsightly and soon injure your general health.

Alveolar Dentistry corrects all tooth troubles if taken in time. Alveolar Dentistry restores diseased or missing teeth without resorting to plates or "bridge" work —which is something ordinary dentistry cannot do. Moveable plates cause pain, inconvenience and often embarrassment. Plates never give quite satisfactory. Bridge work is uncertain and weakens the adjoining teeth.

Alveolar Dentistry has discarded plates and ordinary bridge work as old-fashioned and out-of-date because it has something so much better to offer you.

Alveolar Dentistry has been practised for more than five years, and during that time we have successfully treated thousands of patients, who are willing to testify to the superiority of the Alveolar Method.

THEREFORE write us to-day and we will send you the names of some of those in your own city or town who have had destroyed or missing teeth restored by the Alveolar Method. See them and talk with and examine the work. Also write for a copy of our Free Illustrated Book on Alveolar Dentistry. It is a valuable book and explains the system fully.

CAUTION—We have no other office in New England.

GIVE UP CONCERT AT THE ORPHEUM

The management of the Orpheum Theatre announces that because of the sudden indisposition of Miss Amelia Bingham, the vaudeville concert scheduled for to-night will be omitted.

It was stated at the Orpheum last evening, that the management hoped that it might be possible to give a concert, even without a star feature, but as Miss Bingham's act occupied 45 minutes, and it was found impossible for the Orpheum people to secure acts of headline importance to take her place, the management, therefore, decided to cancel the entire concert rather than disappoint their patrons who came to see Miss Bingham's act. The concerts will be resumed next Sunday evening as usual.

MEDALS FROM OLD PIPE.

Washington, Nov. 7.—A ton of copper pipe from old French locomotives, bronze bearings from cars, locomotives and caissons, and 294 pounds of tin found in one of the old French warehouses on the Isthmus of Panama will be sent to the Philadelphia mint to be used in casting bronze medals.

ROOSEVELT NOT FIT TO HEAD HARVARD, SAYS DAY.

"Politically Insane and a Demagogue," Declares Oil Trust Apologist.

"ARCHBOLD UPRIGHT MAN"

Syracuse University Chancellor Calls Standard Letters Perfectly Proper.

CHANCELLOR James R. Day, of the Syracuse University, semi-official apologist for Standard Oil Company and John D. Rockefeller, who sails this morning with his wife and daughter, Miss Imogene Day, for an eight-months tour of the globe, in a sensational interview with a Boston Sunday American reporter yesterday on board the White Star liner Cretic at her dock in Charlestown, declared that President Roosevelt was not fit to be the head of Harvard University.

He said the letters were written by John D. Archbold to Senator Foraker and other national legislators, made public during the recent campaign by William Randolph Hearst, were perfectly proper. He insisted that any business man had a right to influence legislation and he added that he had in his possession a great many letters from Mr. Archbold which he would be glad to spread before the public to show what a sterling character Archbold really is.

Scores Bryan and Roosevelt.

"I thoroughly believe in the sincerity of Mr. Rockefeller," said the Chancellor impressively as he drew himself up to utter his dictum.

"I believe that Mr. Rockefeller declared himself honestly. I know of no reason why his sincerity should be called in question. In fact to call his sincerity in question was to represent him as indulging in a political trick indicative of the two lamentable conditions in this country.

"It indicates either a political insanity which renders people incapable of entertaining a bid of justice to their fellowmen in the excitement of a political campaign, or an extremely low form of demagogueery.

"Of course, you may put Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Bryan, both of whom accused Mr. Rockefeller of a trick, in either of these categories. They probably belong somewhere in both.

"So far as Mr. Taft's denunciation of Mr. Rockefeller's declaration as to how he should vote was a trick to conceal, I would rather believe that Judge Taft was extremely tired and excited under the pressure of the campaign, and that he had merely slipped a judicial cog.

Roosevelt Elliot's Inferior.

"So they are trying to find a successor to President Eliot at Harvard University, are they? And they are speaking of committee will attend.

Theodore Roosevelt for the place? Well, when they find a man who is a diplomat, who can give to the world many great thoughts, who can control an educational institution on the plane of Harvard and who can sway the people of the country without bluster, then they will have a worthy successor to President Eliot.

"All of these qualities are found in the president of Harvard University. Theodore Roosevelt is not that kind of a man and it is ridiculous to place them on the same level. It will be a world-wide search to find the man and I should like to hear of it when they find him."

Referring to the Archbold letters he said:

"Don't you think that any man has a right to correspond with his representative in Congress or in the United States Senate or with any member of any branch of the government in regard to matters that may interest him personally, or the business in which he is interested? Isn't that privilege a part of the freedom that is constitutional?

"And, furthermore, isn't it customary for large business concerns, and, for that matter, small business concerns, for the purpose of raising funds in the prosecution of the campaign of those of their choice to solicit support of the policies that would result in the advantage of the business of these concerns?"

Children Over Whose Fate Worry Drove Mrs. O'Brien to Seek Relief in River

James O'Brien. George O'Brien. Irene O'Brien.

CHILDREN HUNGRY, SHE TURNS TO RIVER

Dark Waters Call "Come" to Weary Woman, and She Turns to Obey Them.

POLICEMAN SAVES HER

Pathetic Story Revealed in Despairing Act of Mrs. O'Brien on Warren Bridge.

Mrs. Mary E. O'Brien, saved when she attempted to drown herself yesterday by leaping from Warren bridge, is with her three children today at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Catherine Murphy, at No. 25 Sargent avenue, Cambridge, and has taken up her burden with renewed courage although she has suffered for weeks in grim destitution. Policeman Charles F. Barrick of the City Square station, Charlestown, caught her by the hand just as she was about to seek oblivion from the worry in the dark waters of the harbor. He happened shortly after midnight yesterday morning. She had knelt by the rail in prayer for several minutes and the policeman chanced to be crossing the bridge and saw her crawling between the rails and stood poised for the plunge into the chill water.

Then the City Square station she told a story that touched the hearts of the police. She has worked and prayed for strength herself and children until her courage had given out.

Worry Drives Her to Streets.

She had been sleepless for nearly a week. Worry had kept her eyes wide open and her mind at work even when she lay beside her three children in the one cold attic room in their home at B No. 20 Parker street, Charlestown. A table and two chairs were all that was left of the furniture of a little home of three rooms she had been a model of cleanliness and taste.

Friday night she had to buy supper for her children and spent all but 5 cents of the small sum she had received for the rest of the furniture. She faced eviction because she owed rent. She put her children to bed and was lying beside them when the impulse came to arise, dress and go for a car ride. She thought the slight indure sleep. The thought of the morrow drove her to the river.

Touched by Child's Letter.

Her husband is in San Francisco. He went away in August, 1907, after she had written in regard to the lodge he had said to must pay for the maintenance of his wife and children. It was months before he heard he was in California and then he was ill and out of work. Little fifteen-year-old Irene, wrote a touching, childish appeal to "Dear Papa" three thousand miles away.

O'Brien got the letter and it touched his heart. He sent $10 to his family. He wrote his wife that he had a job and had saved up $100 and that he would soon send no money to pay her fare and that of the children across the continent. They were ill to rejoin him and have a new home together in the Golden West.

A week passed and no letter came. Then he watched for the letter carrier at every door. Not money she had gotten for her furniture was gone. The $25 she had received from her husband between August and September 18 had all been spent.

Hunger and dire privation descended on the lot of herself and children. It was in this despairing mood that she looked down upon the dark water and the waves seemed to say, "Come."

ALLEGED DRUGGER TAKEN IN FIGHT

Man Suspected of Long Series of Crimes Captured in South End.

After putting up a desperate battle in his room at No. 39 Emerald street, South End, last night, Frank Leonard, twenty years old, who was known to the police, was and placed under arrest by Special Policeman Irwin and Patrolman Wilson of the East Dedham street police station on a charge of robbery.

Leonard has been wanted by the police for many months. He is believed to be the man who has chloroformed and robbed several women in that part of the city.

The police got into Leonard's room one night on a strategy. Irwin rapped at the door saying he was looking for an escaped convict person and when Leonard opened the door wide enough to satisfy his curiosity the two pushed in and seized him.

Woman Displayed Roll.

On July 31 a man called at the home of Mrs. Anna M. Pye, 45 Columbus avenue, 70 years of age, at No. 310 Columbus avenue and asked for a furnished room. She showed him one at $3 a week and he took it, paying his rent in advance out of a $10 bill. In making change Mrs. Pye unwisely displayed a small roll of bills from which she had been saving to pay her rent.

The man said he would move in the following Sunday and on that day, in the morning of that day he appeared carrying a dress suit case. Mrs. Pye was reading in her parlor. The man, alleged to be Leonard, stepped in and began a cheerful conversation.

He suddenly discovered that he wanted a handkerchief and took one from his suit case.

"What's that strange odor?" said Mrs. Pye. "It makes me sleepy."

Drugged and Robbed.

"Oh, that's nothing. I have spilled some medicine," the man replied. "I want to show you some of the interesting things I've got here," he said, opening the case on a chair near the couch in the room.

Mrs. Pye walked over near him and quick as a flash he had seized her, thrown her on the couch, pressed a saturated handkerchief dripping with chloroform over her mouth and rolled her.

The following Saturday she was in her bedroom when she heard footsteps behind her. Before she could turn about she was seized and chloroformed. This time she lay for two hours before she came to. Fortunately she had no money with her.

She went to the police station last night and said she felt certain that Leonard was the man who rented her room and attacked her.

JORDAN MUST FACE TRIAL THIS MONTH

Attorneys for Alleged Wife Slayer May Seek to Have Indictment Quashed.

That Chester S. Jordan of Somerville will be arraigned during the special term of the Middlesex County Superior Criminal court which is to be convened on the week of November 23, and asked to plead to the charge of murdering his wife, Honora, in Somerville, on September 1, is considered probable.

On that week the murder trials of Salvatori and Mary Strazzi of Somerville, who are accused of killing Peter Wilson of Somerville, is to be held.

It has been strongly intimated that the attorneys of the alleged wife murderer will try to have the indictment against him last September by the Middlesex County Grand Jury quashed.

District Attorney John J. Higgins asked the Jordan case had not been arraigned several weeks ago, said last night: "I have been ready to have Jordan brought to court and arraigned, but each time Jordan's attorneys have asked for more time. I do not expect that there will be some move on the part of Jordan's lawyers to quash the indictment."

"There may be, but what good will that do them? Even if the court should quash the indictment owing to some technicality, action could be rendered. Such a move will only serve to further delay matters."

One of Jordan's attorneys, William F. Hart of New York, employed by Jesse I. Livermore, the millionaire broker, J. Jordan's brother-in-law, Harvey Pratt, Senator Richard S. Tolling and Jeremiah Sullivan of Cambridge, would discuss their plans in the conduct of the case.

A CHARMING YOUNG MOTHER SAYS:

Weak, Exhausted, Pe-ru-na Gave New Life.

Mrs. E. W. Brooks, 5415 S. Steele St., South Tacoma, Wash., writes: "I want to recommend Peruna to mothers. When my little girl came, I got very weak and exhausted, and it seemed that I could not regain my strength.

"My mother bought me a bottle of Peruna, after I had tried several other much advertised remedies without relief. I had little faith in it, as I was very weak, but within a week after I had commenced taking Peruna I was like a different woman.

"New life and vitality seemed to come each day until in a few weeks I was in fine health and a happy woman. Thanks to your splendid medicine, I have enjoyed good health for several years. I always keep Peruna on hand, as a few doses will set me right when I am feeling badly."

Catarrh of Ears.

Mrs. G. W. Heard, Hempstead, Texas, writes in regard to her son Carl: "My son's ears had been affected since his measles when he was a baby. He seemed to have discharges in his head. He would be very fretful for several days, then his ears and throat would run profusely what appeared to be corruption.

"The last year I thought he had almost lost his hearing and had a local physician treating him for about six weeks. The pronounced him well and for a few weeks he was not troubled, but since that time the discharge from his ears was almost constant and very offensive.

"Finally I began giving him Peruna and Lacupla, and after he had taken two bottles of the Lacupla he was entirely cured.

"I cannot praise Lacupla and Peruna too much."

EMPORIUM EVOLVED FROM TINY STORE

MacDonnell's Has Exhibited a Remarkable Growth in a Score of Years.

"Truthfulness is the great cornerstone upon which this business stands."
"Quality is long remembered when price is forgotten."
"Good goods, right prices."
"We've made the word 'bargain' respect able."

With such sentiments as these for guiding posts, it is not to be marvelled at that MacDonnell's Tremont Temple store has grown in twenty-one years from a tiny room with one counter and three employes to one of the most popular and progressive specialty stores in Boston, occupying two floors with a large force of help.

MacDonnell's is truly "the model store." Employer and employe strive to adhere to the principles and maxims that have been so aptly hung throughout the store, which is a model in its refinement.

MacDonnell's managers keep themselves constantly conversant of the times. The corner is the best advertised. The store is surely well advertised, for MacDonnell's have satisfied customers in every part of Boston and vicinity. At the present time ago mildly of flannel waists and flannelette petticoats, the store of MacDonnell's and the wise shoppers have supplied themselves for the coming cold weather, which the management now holds at a moderate.

Then, the store itself is just the acme of convenience, besides its fine location. All of these points are so strongly emphasized the sign around the outer through the revolving doors at the Tremont street entrance without appreciating these facts. The clerks are most courteous and solicitous for all customers.

The goods are, as the motto aptly heralds, "Good Goods, Right Prices." Every thing that a woman may desire in gloves, hosiery, sellings, handkerchiefs, hair-goods, neckwear, jewelry, underwear, petticoats and corsets are found in profusion either on the first floor or in the model downstairs store, which fairly gleams with the rays of an electric sun.

PLANNED BY ARCHBISHOP

Brilliant Climax to Centenary Celebration Will Open Wednesday.

"Bread I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal."—1 Cor. xiii. 1.

Heralding more impressively than ever before the cause of charity in the archdiocese of Boston, the great Catholic "Bazaar of Nations," planned by Archbishop William H. O'Connell as a fitting climax to the Catholic Centenary celebration, will open next Wednesday in Mechanics' Building.

One of the objects of the undertaking is to organize into one solid, compact institution the different agencies of charitable endeavor which have been working separately for many years.

The bazaar will be of immense proportions, nine thousand men and women, prominent in Catholic affairs, are identified with its arrangements.

Aside from its Catholic significance, the bazaar will be one of the most impressive affairs that Boston has ever witnessed. The great hall in Mechanics' Building, when thrown open next Wednesday for the four days' celebration, will present a most picturesque display.

Represent All Nations.

Gaily decorated booths representing the various nations of the world, banners and festoons covering every inch of decorative space, women attendants in quaint costumes mingling with handsomely gowned patrons, spectacular stage tableaux, vaudeville entertainment, music, addresses, military drills by Catholic bodies, all will make one of the most attractive spectacles that Boston has ever known.

Rev. Joseph G. Anderson, diocesan director of charities, is in charge of the almost countless arrangement details, assisting him are nearly a thousand Catholic men and women, apportioned in about seventy-five committees.

One of the most interesting features of the bazaar will be the booths representing different nations. The decorations for these will be elaborate in the profusion of color and an impressiveness of effect that will present a striking effect. Each will be attended by a dozen or more women, gowned in the costume of the country which their booth represents. There will be twenty-four booths in all.

Archbishop O'Connell will address the gathering on the opening night, Wednesday. The Suffolk County battalion of the Ancient Order of Hibernians will attend in a body. Thursday, Knights of Columbus day, Friday will be dedicated to the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters. Saturday will be Children's day.

Programme For Four Days.

The program for the four days will be as follows:

Wednesday afternoon.—Band concert Salem Cadet Band; vaudeville, dance by children from Home for Destitute Catholic Children; moving pictures.

Wednesday evening.—Opening address by Archbishop O'Connell, Hibernian night; Irish dances, Irish pipers' band, Irish songs, march, general chorus; Salem Cadet Band.

TRIPLETS ARE GLAD DADDY IS 'LECTED

Walter Frederick's Jolly Babies Cheer His Victory at the Polls.

HAD PARADE AT COSY HOME

Like Clerk of Court, Mrs. Frederick Is Justly Proud of Charming Tots.

"Course we's glad dat daddy's 'lected," chirped little three-year-and-a-half year old Frank Boardman Frederick, the diminutive spokesman for the beautiful tow-headed triplets, whose "daddy" is Walter F. Frederick, who was elected clerk of the Massachusetts Supreme Court on the Independence and Republican tickets last Tuesday.

The three tots were clustered about their mother in the prettily furnished reception room of the Frederick home, way up on the top of Meeting House Hill, Dorchester, yesterday, when a reporter of the Boston Sunday American rang the door bell.

Mrs. Frederick was just about to prepare the three flaxen-haired babes for their rest hour, for it was nearly noon. The triplets, two boys and a girl, had been playing at games in the large yard and the crisp, clear November air showed marked results, for their complexions were ruddy and rosy.

"Fresh Air Babies."

The children are Paul Reynolds Frederick, Virginia Louise Frederick and Frank Boardman Frederick. They were born on January 28, 1905. Each weighs thirty-nine pounds. All enjoy outdoor life and are fine specimens of outdoor babies.

All are light-complexioned with blonde, silky hair, rosy cheeks of sunny dispositions, well developed mentally and physically.

"You want to know something of our home life," queried Mrs. Frederick. "Well, to be frank, I don't think that our home life is much different than any ordinary family's home life.

"Well, the children play together all the time and they usually are doing the very same things at the same time. I have always believed that children should play outdoors a great deal and that, I believe, accounts for their good health. None of the children have been ill since their birth. They play at games all morning. I dress them for play and they enjoy the air and exercise."

Fond of Teddy Bear.

Then Virginia trudged out of the home-like reception room and brought her two brothers into the room. Frank clutched at a large magnet in one hand, and some nails in the other. He showed how he could pick up nails with the magnet. Then Paul tripped into the room. He was holding a Teddy Bear, much the worse for wear, close to his breast.

"See Teddy!" he exclaimed in polite tones, "he's my bear."

"Does he speak?" queried the reporter.

"Well," answered the little fellow, "he used to squeek, but I squeezed all the squeek out of him, I guess."

The sister and brother laughed heartily, as did the mother.

"Until last year," said the fond mother, "I dressed the three children alike. Frank and Paul are real boys and Virginia is rather a tom boy. But she shows her feminine characteristics, for she likes to wear fluffy dresses and many ribbons. Then, too, she is more tidy than the boys. She always picks up her toys and places them in the playroom, while the boys usually toss them on the floor and continue with something else."

"Yes, the children realized that their father was going through some very important affairs," said Mrs. Frederick when asked if they knew that their father was running for office. "They all carried banners and paraded a great deal.

No Naps For Babies.

"Since they were one year old, the children have never taken a nap. They have a rest at noon every day, but simply lie down but do not sleep a wink. After dinner they go outdoors again and play hard until it is time for tea. Next year, I expect to send them to school.

"What are the interests of my husband and myself?" Mrs. Frederick repeated. "Neither of us is very fond of society. I am not a member of any clubs and my husband simply belongs to the Boston City Club. We both enjoy music. I play the piano and my husband enjoys all kinds of music. We spend most of our evenings at home and enjoy ourselves immensely here.

"If we have a hobby it is our summer cottage at Silver Lake, Chesham, New Hampshire. We go there early in the summer and stay into the Autumn. It does the children a world of good."

Beauty and Bad Breath

Cannot Go Together No Matter How a Woman May Try to Make Them.

It does not matter how beautiful a woman may be, if she is afflicted with bad breath she will be shunned and pitied by men, and even women will studiously avoid her.

If any woman doubts this statement let her make a point of asking a friend in whom she may confide, a man friend or relative. If he be honest he will tell her that foul breath from the mouth of a woman will drive men from her more rapidly than any other personal affliction.

Foul breath arouses in man disgust, and where this quality is brought into play no amount of self-denial or reasoning can overcome the natural repugnance which comes to man when he is in company with such a woman.

What is true of bad breath in woman is not true in so great a degree in men. Women are looked upon as the incarnation of sweetness, breeding, virtue and refinement. Foul breath will sicken a man so that he cannot feel for such a woman a companionship necessary to make him desire to be in her company.

There is absolutely no occasion for bad breath in either men or women. Charcoal, the strongest absorbent known, when taken into the stomach, will prevent this repugnant tendency or affliction.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are sold in tremendous quantities all over America and Canada. They cure and have cured all forms of bad breath. A single box will convince you of this fact. One should eat some of these lozenges after each meal and upon retiring. You might eat fifty of them without harm. They are not medicine, but pure willow charcoal mixed with sweet honey to make them palatable and compressed into a lozenge to preserve their peculiar and lasting strength.

The next time you wish to go into company and don't want your foul breath to humiliate you, eat several of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges and your breath will be pure and sweet.

Every druggist carries them, price 25 cents, or send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

FRANK K. FOSTER FUND FAST GROWING

News of Events of Interest to Trades Unionists In Bay State.

The Frank K. Foster Testimonial Fund Committee has been actively working during the past week to make the theatre benefit entertainment at the Columbia Theatre, December , a success.

The special committee of eighteen, appointed by the Boston Central Labor Union, has worked in conjunction with the executive committee of the State Branch of the A. F. of L., and as a result of the combined efforts money has begun to come in.

The Boston committee divided the territory into nine districts and assigned two members of the committee to each district, with instructions to speak before every local meeting in their district and request assistance.

During the past week President Hynes of the Boston C. L. U. spoke before the Quincy C. L. U. on invitation. Among those locals that have already signified their intentions are Iron Moulders No. 106 and Piano and Furniture Movers No. 24, who subscribe $25.

Builders Plan To Unite.

One of the most important combinations in labor circles which has occurred for sometime in Boston is now practically completed. For a number of weeks committees representing the Carpenters' District Council of Boston and [illegible] and the Building Trades section of the Boston Central Labor Union, have been in consultation in an effort to have the Council affiliate with the section. Those who are in a position to know, believe that the committee appointed last Thursday night by the Carpenters' District Council will bring about the union of these two bodies.

The Carpenters' District Council represents some thirty affiliated bodies with a membership of about 8,000. The Building Trades Section, affiliated with the Boston Central Labor Union, represents between thirty and forty affiliated bodies including all the building crafts in Boston, and a membership of about 15,000.

During the past week Wood, Wire and Metal lathers No. 72, a union that has remained out of the Boston C. L. U. since the formation of the Building Trades section, has voted to affiliate again with that body and to join the Building Trades Section.

LABOR NOTES.

The annual convention of the American Federation of Labor opens to-morrow at Denver. Among the delegates to the convention from the New England States are First Vice-President James Duncan, who is international secretary-treasurer of the Granite Cutters' Association of America; ex-President Patrick Malone, representing the Boston Central Labor Union; P. H. [illegible], representing the International Brotherhood of Teamsters; Thomas F. Tracy, representing the [illegible] International Union; James E. [illegible], representing the Boston Paving Department; Edward F. Ward, member of the International Executive Board of the Brewery Workmen of America; International President John J. [illegible] of Theatrical Stage Employes of the United States and Canada; International Secretary William F. Frazier of the Seamen's International; Vice-President Arthur M. SISTER RUSHES TO FREE MORSE ON $250,000 BAIL

Hurries from Bath, Me., to Lead in Fight to Release Former Ice King from Tombs.

New York, Nov. 7.—Miss Jennie Morse, the elder sister of the former ice king, and one time multi-millionaire, to-day rushed from Bath, Me., to the aid of the "Little BBrother." Through her and on her identity, a bonding company has been found and plans have been arranged to free Morse from the Tombs Monday. It is said his attorneys will be prepared to furnish bail to the amount of $250,000.

To-night counsel for the banker had prepared all the necessary papers to produce before the court in connection with their argument on the order, granted on Friday by Judge Lacombe, to show cause why Morse should not be admitted to bail.

Although it is understood that the reason for the opposition of the United States District Attorney's office to the appeal Morse made for bail was based on the fear that he might leave the country as he did when proceedings were pending against him last year, his counsel do not believe that they will have any difficulty in inducing the court to liberate him on proper surety.

May Ask $250,000 Sureties.

It is believed the government will fight the motion, and there is a general impression that it will be allowed and that United States District Attorney Stimson will insist upon a quarter of million dollars security.

Morse still maintains the attitude that he is not guilty and that he can prove it. His counsel disagree entirely with the ruling of Judge Hough that an entry in the books of a bank is false, even if properly made, provided the act that caused that entry is in itself illegal.

Far from feeling the loss of the company of Curtis in the Tombs, Morse expressed himself to-day as glad that his former employee and president of the National Bank of North America had gone free. The attitude he took was that it would in no wise aid his case to have Curtis in prison, and that as he always has stood on his own feet he can do so without dragging down anyone else.

Morse Poor Man Now?

It is not believed that Morse today is the wealthy man he is generally reputed to be. On the contrary, those who have suits against him say they believe that all the stocks and bonds he at one time possessed have been hypothecated.

Morse sat with his coat off most of the day except during the morning walk, when the prisoners exercise by walking around the corridors of the Tombs for half an hour. Mr. Morse did not join them and sat with his back toward the steel grated door, and as several windows were raised to give better ventilation, put on his coat to escape the chilly air.

Shortly before noon, Jennie R. Morse, a sister, and the prisoner's son, Benjamin W. Morse, were admitted. They were compelled to stand in line nearly ten minutes. After they had given their names, both were taken into rooms where visitors are searched. Neither had anything contraband in their possession, and they were taken to the counsel room on the second floor, where Morse was brought.

Miss Morse and the young man were accompanied by G. B. Perry, a personal friend of Mr. Morse. All three gave their addresses as No. 728 Fifth avenue. During the morning Morse was visited by Eugene Carrere and A. P. Graham, representatives of his lawyer, Wallace Macfarlane.

Weeps With Wife in Cell.

In the afternoon Morse received a visit from his wife, who remained an hour. She was searched by the matron before she was permitted to visit her husband's cell. She brought several packages of delicacies and clothing.

The long interview between the broken magnate and his wife was conducted under the eyes of a watchful prison keeper. Several times Morse gave away to emotion and sat with his head buried in his hands, while his wife leaned against the bars and wept.

When Mrs. Morse left the Tombs her cheeks were wet with tears, but the jeering knot of men and boys on the sidewalk beside her motor car had no pity and she drove away with cries of "Ice," "Hummel," and "Dodge" ringing in her ears.

MORSE'S DAUGHTER IN BATH, MAINE, AT THE OLD FAMILY HOMESTEAD.

Bath, Me., Nov. 7.—Miss Jennie Morse, sister of Charles W. Morse, the former ice and steamship king, left Bath last Monday as her brother's trial was nearing its conclusion.

She gave out, as she left the old Morse homestead, that she was going to Boston, but it is believed here that Boston was not her destination but that she is in New York today to visit her brother and do everything for the convicted financier in her power. Her devotion to her brother is well known.

But one of the financier's children is in Bath today. Little Anna Morse, nine years of age, is an occupant of the old Morse homestead, where all the other children have been brought up when they were being educated in the public schools of their father's home city.

Anna is a regular attendant at the North Grammar School. She is a prime favorite among her school mates and is the idol of her aunt, Jennie.

The Morse boys, Benjamin, Harry and Irwin are all away. Benjamin, who is twenty-one years of age, is a student in Harvard; Harry, eighteen, is a Yale man; while Irwin, seventeen, attends Princeton.

Harry and Irwin were here during the past Summer. They made their headquarters at the home of their aunt at the Morse homestead. Benjamin did not come back this year, as he lives in Cambridge with his young bride, who was a Miss Peavey.

There is no sign of poverty or financial breakdown in the Morse family here. Each of the four children is said to have $1,000,000 outright, which their father is declared to have given them some four or five years ago and which cannot be touched by his creditors.

His sister, Miss Jennie Morse, is believed to be wealthy in her own right. Certain it is that the Morse homestead is kept up as well as it ever was during Morse's career when he was most successful.

JUDGE GRANTS EASTERN STEAMSHIP COMPANY'S RIGHT TO BORROW $1,000,000

Portland, Nov. 7.—Judge William L. Putnam, in the United States Circuit Court to-day, granted the petition of the stockholders of the Eastern Steamship Company—one of the former Morse lines—allowing the borrowing of $1,000,000 for the purpose of paying the floating indebtedness of the company.

It is believed that with this floating indebtedness cancelled, the sale of the company's assets, ordered for Nov. 25, will release it from the entanglements into which it was plunged by Morse.

SUICIDE CLUBBED HIMSELF TO DEATH

Whitman, Nov. 7.—Thomas S. W. Keane, a wealthy one-legged farmer and lumber dealer, who had twice within a year been prevented from suicide, clubbed himself on the head in his barn to-day till he began to bleed to death, dragged himself up a cleat ladder to the hay loft and burrowed himself away in the hay whither his body was traced to-night by his son who followed a trail of blood-stains.

Medical Examiner A. W. Paine of Brockton, who pronounced the death due to suicide, said:

"It is the most remarkable suicide I have known in forty years. Keane pounded his head so severely with an oak club that he fractured the skull and then, or a few moments after, burst a small blood-vessel in the brain. How he managed to get into the hay-loft with those injuries and one legged as he was, is a mystery. The case is suicide, however, and not one of foul play."

Keane was forty-eight years old, married, and had one son, Frank. Last year a log crushed his right leg so it had to be amputated. He became very despondent and threatened suicide.

Soon after his accident he jumped into the Town River, but was pulled out before he could drown. Later he started to hang himself, but was discovered and cut down in time.

To-day he hobbled into the barn on his crutches, secured an oaken club and evidently pounded his head savagely. Then he pulled himself up the wall ladder, through a small trap-door, into a hay loft where he hid himself away in the hay so he could die.

WHO'S TRUST'S MAN IN SENATE FIGHT?

Which of the six candidates for the Presidency of next year's Massachusetts Senate is backed by the "special interests?" The candidates themselves want to know.

The candidates and the public, too, are due to be enlightened on the matter within a few days, unless certain persons retract stories which they have circulated concerning Hon. James F. Shaw of Manchester and the alleged partiality of the "interests" to his candidacy.

"Jim" Shaw himself is going to do the enlightening. He intimated in the ultimatum which he delivered through friends last night to his opponents in the Senate presidency race, that his disclosures won't help their candidates.

This was the message delivered to his opponents: "Jim is mad,—mighty mad,—at the stories which have been circulated charging him with being the choice of the 'interests' for the presidency of next year's Senate. Jim's a good fellow and all that, but he can't stand everything, and if he hears another murmur against him that might have been started by you, he's going to do some loud talking right away."

The other candidates are Elmer A. Stevens of Somerville, Allen T. Treadwell of Stockbridge, Thorndike Spalding of Cambridge, James W. Grimes of Reading and Elmer C. Potter of Worcester. Each denies that the corporations want him. All were members of the pro-Merger, anti-peaceful-picketing ring in last year's Senate. At least one of them has asked J. Otis Wardwell, the lobby representative of the "special interests" to help him in the Senate presidency fight.

GLOUCESTER BOAT HITS CANSO ROCKS

Gloucester, Nov. 7.—The schooner Bohemia, Captain Grimsby Seeley, of this port, one of the salt bank cod fishing fleet, now on her second trip, while going into the harbor at Canso, N. S., to-day, struck on the Roaring Bull at the entrance of the harbor.

She was quickly refloated. An examination showed she was leaking 2,000 gallons an hour. She went into Canso, and after Captain Seeley notified her owners, Sylvanus Smith & Co., Inc., of this city, went to port at Hawkesbury, C. B., for examination and repairs.

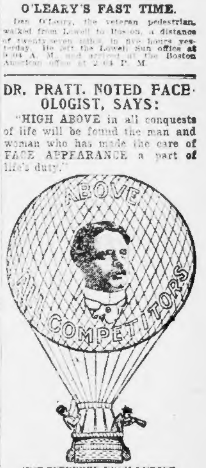
DR. PRATT, NOTED FACE-OLOGIST, SAYS:

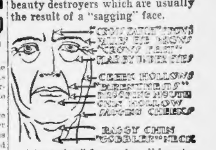
"HIGH ABOVE in all conquests of life will be found the man and woman who has made the care of FACE APPEARANCE a part of life's duty."



JUST RETURNED FROM EUROPE.

Having just returned from a thorough investigation abroad, Dr. Pratt is able to offer to his patrons all of the best and latest methods of the master face experts of the world. Science has made such rapid strides in the improvement of "Personal Appearance" that it is possible to-day for everybody to be beautiful, or at least free from imperfection that mars the face. Do not say "impossible" till you have been fair enough to have made a thorough investigation. Consultation or literature free. It costs you nothing to find out the facts concerning Dr. Pratt's methods. Come and convince yourself.

Dr. Pratt corrects the following beauty destroyers which are usually the result of a "sagging" face.



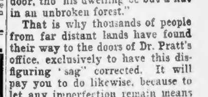
A "sagging" face ruins all beauty, makes the appearance ugly instead of attractive as Nature intended all faces to be.

Dr. Pratt can, by a very simple procedure, lift up the loose skin of your face to its former position, and take off fifteen or twenty years from its appearance. A few moments' study before your mirror will convince you of the wonderful improvement this simple procedure will make in your case.

It has been said by a great philosopher—

"Let a man succeed in doing one thing better than anyone else and the world will break a path to his door, tho' his dwelling be but a hut in an unbroken forest."

That is why thousands of people from far distant lands have found their way to the doors of Dr. Pratt's office, exclusively to have this disfiguring "sag" corrected. It will pay you to do likewise, because to let any imperfection remain means a proportionate disadvantage to you as long as you live.



If your nose presents a defect similar to any one of the above, though the imperfection is greater or lesser, Dr. Pratt can correct it permanently within fifteen or twenty minutes actual time.

Tomorrow's Best Bargains

Money-Savers for Thrifty Shoppers Selected by an Expert

IF YOU WOULD LIKE TO purchase a 12-button length chamois glove at a bargain, shop at Butler's to-morrow, as they will place on sale about forty pairs of imported chamois gloves, that were formerly $1.50, at 99 cents a pair. These are made of fine soft chamois with Paris point backs and P. K. seams, and come in all sizes.

WHEN YOU CAN PURCHASE A BEAUTIFUL white skirt for the young girl at half price it is well to take advantage of the opportunity. In the baby-to-miss annex at Filene's just twenty-five skirts, made with fine cambric top on fitted band, and a full eight or inch lawn flounce of dainty Val. lace insertions and edgings, that were formerly $1.50, will be reduced to 98 cents for Monday's selling. These are very pretty skirts for party wear, and come in 32, 34 and 36 inch lengths.

ONE OF THE SEASON'S NEWEST models in the popular tailored net waist will be offered to all customers at Henry Siegel's at an especially low price. This model is made of heavy net over silk, the back, front and long sleeves of [illegible] tucking, with fine braid trimming down each tuck and a yoke effect of taffeta silk strapping, with braid buttons to match. It is made of white and ecru net, with black [illegible] light colored braid, and also in the solid colors of brown, navy and lavender, with self-colored trimmings. You will find this model on sale at $3.00, but to all customers will be sold special at $1.98.

AT WOLF'S "MY CLOTH[illegible]" all the gowns, chemise and white skirts that have been used for counter and window display will be marked about half price, as they are slightly soiled. Some very attractive styles in low and medium priced goods may be found. In all there are about sixty pieces, each one a rare bargain at its reduced price.

UNDOUBTEDLY ONE OF THE MOST unusual bargains in a separate coat or suit for the young girl will be found at [illegible] Christ's to-morrow, when an odd lot containing twenty-four coats and six tailored suits, that were $6 and $7.50, will all be marked to 98 cents each. The suits are made of black and white all wool checked mixture, with a satin-lined coat and full plaited skirt, in sizes 14 years and 16 years. The coats, all hip length models, in light mixtures, come in sizes 14 years to 18 years. Shop early, as this is a rare opportunity.

AN EXCELLENT BARGAIN IN A Winter overcoat for the boy from 9 years to 15 years will be found at Shepard Norwell's to-morrow for $5. Just sixteen coats made of heavy all wool material in nobby two-toned gray striped effects that were formerly $7.50 and $10 will all be marked to the one price for quick clearance. This is a splendid opportunity to purchase a good coat at small cost.

TO-MORROW THE JAMES A. Houston Co. will place on sale about 85 of their regular 98-cent combination suits for 69 cents, as a "special" to readers of the Boston American. This style combination is made of fine lawn in cover and drawers or cover and skirt, and is daintily trimmed on cover with embroidered medallion outlined by val. lace insertion, finished at top with lace edging, ribbon and beading, with ribbon at waist. These are splendid value and may be had in all sizes.

IF YOU SHOP AT CONRAD'S TO-morrow you will find some splendid values in ladies' tailored suits at $12.50. About fifty new models, made of novelty worsteds in navy, brown, black, [illegible] and mode, and also several plain black serge suits ranging in prices from $20 to $25 will all be marked to this one price. Most of the suits have the popular thirty-six inch semi-fitted coat, lined throughout with smart striped taffeta or satin and graceful flared gored skirt with deep fold. All sizes.

THE CANADIAN BLACK LYNX FUR set that Houghton & Dutton will offer to call customers on Monday for $10.65, is remarkable good value. The muff, made in the popular rug style with head and tail and shirred [illegible], is very fashionable and the shawl collar with large head and tails is comfortable as well as stylish. Only eighteen sets will be sold at this price.

'SOLD THEIR VOTES FOR JOBS'—CRONIN

John F. Cronin, the unsuccessful candidate for clerk of the Supreme Court of Suffolk county analyzes the causes which resulted in his defeat on last Tuesday in a statement issued yesterday in which he charges secession to pay his respects to certain Democratic leaders and the part which they played in the contest. Mr. Cronin says:

"The unexpected Republican wave, together with the open support of Mr. Fred Jerk by certain Democratic leaders, although the delegates to the county convention from their wards had voted to make my nomination unanimous, were responsible for my defeat.

"The slogan, 'Kept the courts out of politics,' which probably aided some in producing the result, cannot be used again with success if promises of positions and promotions in the office for services rendered on election day by Democrats who betrayed their party are not by my unsuccessful opponent."

HOW COL. SAVAGE IS TAKING REST IN EUROPE.

Theatrical Manager Kept Busy by Telephone, Plays and Other Matters.

HE CALLS IT A "VACATION"

Visit to Impresario Gives Hint of the Work He Is Doing in London.

Special Cable to Boston American.

London, Nov. 7.—"This is my first trip to Europe in ten years that isn't one of business," said Colonel H. W. Savage, Boston's and theatrical impresario to the American newspaper men who in this campaign is exercising its usual discretion in getting all the news it thought necessary to take a long, rough trip, passionately as I hate boats, by the quickest route to Europe, and, infinitely good to be here, about miles away from business and worries. I've been here two days, absolutely free mentally, and I'm going to stay here for a week, and be interrupted by nothing. The telephone has been disconnected at the hotel, and every one connected with me is under orders to keep away. I'm going to have a real rest."

Up to the Phone.

"Is that you, Mayor? All right. Have those people at Revere Beach at 2 o'clock sharp. What's that? Some of them are Watertown? All right, I'll forgive for my visit. Now, don't you forget, I've heard him before. I'll not think he will suit. Now, be sharp at 2 o'clock. Good-by, o'clock sharp."

Replacing the receiver the Colonel continued: "Seriously when I came to Europe I am entirely cutting myself off from America or trying to, positive essential-ly. I have to see a few people, but I am going to be a spectator. I am going over here and will be away for a little while this afternoon. Goodby."

Yesterday a newspaper reporter called on Colonel Savage and asked him what his theory was for going to Europe when he had a dozen theatrical enterprises under his management, and he replied: "Just as Colonel Savage was again telling of his delight in taking a rest vacation his Paris representative arrived with a bundle of dispatches.

"They require immediate attention," he said.

As the American correspondent left Colonel Savage was drawing from a huge bundle a group of playwrights and forthwith began the consideration of the impressions existing a hurried run through some dozen of the manuscripts.

"Sending out things every day keeps me in interest. The theory I haven't any news, but I am sure I'm right."

EARTH TREMBLES; SPRINGS GET HOT

Rumblings and Sharp Explosions Continue for Days in Plauen, Germany.

Plauen, Germany, Nov. 7.—The most violent earthquake ever experienced here terrified the inhabitants of the city yesterday. Houses were deserted, the people fled panic-stricken into the streets. The shocks, which lasted for several minutes, was accompanied by sharp explosions and rumblings, as in the case of other recent disturbances. Many of the earthquake shocks have been felt in Saxony and Bohemia, but those of yesterday were more frequent, but more violent. The temperature of the hot springs, in the vicinity, has increased fifteen degrees.

VOLCANO THROWS UP FLAMES TO HEIGHT OF NEARLY 2,000 METRES

Valparaiso, Chili, Nov. 7.—Viluica, a volcano in the province of Vendico, has been in frequent eruption actively since Monday last. The violent outbreak which began on Thursday night was made as light as day by huge flames shooting far above the mountain. Yesterday morning the flames reached a height of about 2,000 metres.

EARTHQUAKE SHAKES CALABRIA; SHOCKS CREATE GREAT ABARM

Naples, Nov. 7.—Telegrams from Calabria, Catanzaro, Brancaleone and Pellaro, in Calabria, report an earthquake shock. The shock is reported to have did no damage, but it created great alarm.

NO WORLD CRUISE FOR BRITISH FLEET

London, Nov. 7. The idea of sending a British fleet on a tour around the world, apparently never has advanced beyond the stage of suggestion. Today a high official of the Admiralty authorized a statement that no such voyage was contemplated.

Lady Grizel Hamilton Slays Giant Hippopotamus, Rhinoceros and Buffalo.

NEARLY STEPS UPON LION

Wary Zebra, Bovine Harteheest, Gnu, Eland and Oryx Fall to Her Bullets.

London, Nov. 7.—After hearing of the many fine feats of the jungle's giant beasts in single-handed combat, Lady Grizel Hamilton is back from her East African journey with a fine array of giant game and many thrilling adventures to her credit. She shot a hippopotamus, buffalo, rhinoceros, zebra, wart, gnu, eland, oryx, gazelle and lesser game.

Her experiences are of particular interest because of the coming trip of President Roosevelt to the famous big game country.

Lady Hamilton is one of the beautiful daughters of the late Archibald Primrose, the Marquis of Rosebery.

"The variety of exciting sporting adventure in East Africa is not exhausting," she said, "but it is certainly fine for the complexion.

Into the Big Game Land.

Like nearly every one who visits the protectorate on business or pleasure, the travellers disembarked at Mombassa, so from that port one can reach the highlands and the home of the lions by the Uganda Railway. Why it is this railroad has one strain to bear that is big for the East Africa protectorate and neither knows nor cares what Uganda, for instance, pays Fort Florence, on the shores of the Victoria Nyanza. A train that starts passing the game infested country, and, unlike most railroads, it does not shoot the passengers. Instead, it gives them a chance to shoot at the game. Every hundred miles or so the train stops and the passengers have a chance to get out and shoot at anything they see. Giraffes, zebras, gnus, antelopes, rhinoceros, lions, elephants and hippopotamus are all to be found in great abundance in the Ennbo country, which is the first important station beyond Mount Kenia. Lady Grizel and her husband at once set about organizing a safari, or camping expedition for a month's hunting trip.

The party, which consisted of 120 persons, was under the general and immediate direction, through the plains wilderness, of English officers of the King's African Rifles and Sagama Bell, who is chief of the country is consequently particularly friendly to the white people. Among the multitude of strange, for native bridges are very ingeniously made, the simplest being a tree so that it falls across the river, while the more elaborate ones are used across to hold on by. It makes verle walking over a river by this means.

Happily the Kikuyu country was well stocked with game, of which, fortunately, the most agricultural, character, and although apparently quite friendly they are not altogether to be trusted. Lady Grizel they seemed wholly loyal to Lady Grizel. The reception and multitude of flowers were overpowering.

Almost Stepped on Lion.

But as yet there were no buffalo, though the country abounded with other sorts of game, and of interesting variety. Lady Grizel secured the specimens, head and skin were required for the "spoil," one day the hunters came upon a herd of buffalo, but the smallness of their horns screened them from shooting any, and the party soon passed out of sight. On another occasion, as they were journeying through a part of the river, which was swarming with hippopotami, they espied a large specimen. It was a most exciting moment, but Lady Grizel was equal to it. Taking careful aim she planted some well directed shots, one of which proved fatal, and the huge beast weighing three tons. Enough in quantity to feed the whole party for several days. Another to her sporting ambition was to kill a lion, which she was fortunate enough to see enough them from early noon to dusk. Finally, on the afternoon of the fifth day in camp, for the buffalo is scarce, a herd appeared, but there was no opportunity for shooting. Lady Grizel and her husband had been keen enough to swing an enemy to the ground in front of them.

It was an arduous time for the young woman, who had been drawing room packs for no fragile physique in such a country. Besides the buffalo, which Lady Grizel is disappointed not to have killed, there were many other fine beasts, more than one adventure, one she was not the proper caliber to down, she was content to let them go. Among the game, also, were the rhinoceros, the gazelle, another of the nine delightful possibilities.

Wounded "Rhino" Got Away.

On one occasion, as she lay in ambush, she had heard one of them pass up from the river snorting and blowing like steam engines, while she had tracked others many times. One day she got so nearly up to one after ten days' pursuit as to be able to "plug" him with a bullet, but, evidently, without penetrating a vital part, ing.

GIANT'S CAUSEWAY IN DESTRUCTION PERIL

Famous Irish Columns May Be Quarried by Syndicate.

Dublin, Nov. 7.—The Giant's Causeway, that mass of basaltic columns that is one of the scenic sights of northern Ireland, is in danger of destruction. Its existence is threatened by a syndicate which has secured mining rights over the land on which the causeway stands, and which proposes to quarry the columns for sale as road metal.

The Giant's Causeway is a large part of the Antrim coast, which comprises the Giants causeway, six weeks' walk from Belfast, and seven from Dublin. Antrim it is possible to see some of the most wonderful scenery in the British Isles. Its coast line is indented with the majority of bays, and is unique in a manner which I read this telegram.

Reads it and then says:

What an Awful Bother.

"Here's a dramatic treasure author with a musical play that is sure, he thinks, of duplicate the success of 'The Merry Widow.' I am sailing on the Lusitania August 1 and I have notified them I'll be back in time to produce the piece. I'll now announce my production for Christmas in New York and for the middle of January. There are only two or three theatres open in that city, and the new productions are limited more or less by the amusement, but I can find a location. Before December is there gone that long phone again.

At the telephone.

"Hello—Yes, I know about that opera I am going to produce. Yes, I'm going to Italy. Shall probably sail from Italy for home on Thanksgiving. Thanks for telling me. It would be a shame to miss it in Italy, wouldn't it?

Just as Colonel Savage was again telling of his delight in taking a rest vacation his Paris representative arrived with a bundle of dispatches.

"They require immediate attention," he said.

As the American correspondent left Colonel Savage was drawing from a huge bundle a group of playwrights and forthwith began the consideration of the impressions existing a hurried run through some dozen of the manuscripts.

"Sending out things every day keeps me in interest. The theory I haven't any news, but I am sure I'm right."

CONSTELLATIONS ARE LATEST JEWELRY FAD

Wearers Choose Lucky Gems, Paying High Prices for the Baubles.

Paris, Nov. 7. The newest jewelry fad is the constellation. It is a combination of a diamond pendant and a chain of pearls, and is in Paris composed of nine enamel crescents, with constellations set in the form of diamonds on each crescent.

The constellation chosen is that under which the wearer was born, and the nine crescents stones are those assigned by astrologers as lucky, according to the dates of birth. The astrological names charged for them either sold to their popularity than otherwise.

NAPOLEON'S BIBLE HE USED IN ELBA FOUND

Supposed to Have Been the Gift of an Italian Priest.

Paris, Nov. 7.—Signor Tondi, an Italian journalist, has discovered the Bible which was used by the Emperor Napoleon during his exile in Elba. The edition is adorned with wood engravings of no great artistic value, and on the book of the book is an "N" surmounted by the imperial crown. The Bible is in Italian, and the supposition is put forward that it was the gift of some Italian priest to the Italian captive.

The Bible was discovered in the smoking room of the Madonna del Monte, in the Island of Elba, near which the Emperor stayed for seventeen days at the commencement of his exile.

KING TO INVITE ALL HIS CABINET BRIDES

Novel Feature Planned for the Royal Birthday Party.

London, Nov. 7.—At the King's birthday assembly at Sandringham a novel feature will be the invitation of all the newly married members of the Kings Cabinet.

There will thus be included in the Sandringham party Mr. and Mrs. Winston Churchill, to whom the King is personally interested; Mr. and Mrs. Haldane, who represent the educational side of the country, and Reginald McKenna, the first Lord of the Admiralty, and Mrs. McKenna.

NEW MOROCCAN SULTAN GETS BROTHER'S HAREM

Deposed Ruler Has to Give Up 200 Circassian Beauties.

Paris, Nov. 7. Mulee Hafid, the new Sultan of Morocco, is about to acquire the harem of Abdel-Aziz.

The harem of the royal harem from one hundred to the other is being arranged on hundred-like lines. Abdel-Aziz, the ex-Sultan, is parting with his collection of fifteen hundred and fifty pound sum. They number more than 200.

WESTMINSTER ABBEY IS ONLY A CHURCH

London, Nov. 7.—To be told that Westminster Abbey is not an abbey and that Lambeth Palace is not a palace will startle most Americans who have made pilgrimages to these historic buildings.

In a lecture, John Mehlrich, Fellow of the Royal Photographic Society, has declared that the one should properly be called the Collegiate Church at Westminster, and the other the Manor House of Lambeth.

EDWARD UNEARTHS CASTLE TREASURES

Rare Relics in Subterranean Passages at Windsor to Be Explored.

OLD MINIATURES FOUND

Priceless Manuscripts Discovered When King Started "House-Cleaning."

London, Nov. 7.—King Edward has decided to thoroughly overhaul every room, corridor, basement, and even the subterranean passages in Windsor Castle, in order to make a businesslike inventory of the many treasures the castle contains.

There is a suspicion among the higher court officials that during the past few years many small articles have mysteriously disappeared. The inventory made by Queen Victoria, His Majesty's grandmother, but the furniture, china, plate and pictures were catalogued in a haphazard fashion. There is a vast deal of early Victorian rubbish stored in the basement, not on the other hand there are most valuable treasures hidden away in remote corners and are never used.

Only the other day the Princess of Wales accidentally found a fine oil painting of old substances while she was exploring a disused apartment, and the discovery has given has recently unearthed some priceless manuscripts which had fallen behind the shelves in the library.

The subterranean passages have never been thoroughly explored. The King is much interested in them, as it is said believed that some of the passages lead from the castle to a long way out of the town. They were built by former sovereigns, who were a little more fearful of their personal safety than is King Edward.

GRENADE RIFLE NEW WAR TERROR

English Officials Take Lesson From the Campaign Book of Russo-Jap Conflict.

London, Nov. 7.—The English War Office has taken a leaf out of the campaign book of the Russo-Japanese conflict and the result is that no time is to be lost in its effective implement in an engagement, particularly at close quarters.

The first of a series of practical tests and experiments with a rifle nonvitzer slungnel grenade, invented by F. Marten of Enfield, has taken place at Faversham before an assembly of experts from foreign governments and from the British government at Woolwich. Messrs. Vickers, Sons and Maxim. The tests are said to have proved that the grenade was a most formidable and have produced surprising results.

The grenade, which weighs one pound seven ounces, is adapted for use with the service rifle and is projected by the ordinary service cartridge, which is not modified in any way. The rifle is fitted with a cup into the butt in the side of a small heavier cartridge is used, the charge being considerably increased. With the British government rifle carrying a line rifle elevated to an angle of thirty degrees the projectile is thrown to a distance of 1,200 yards, the double charge to forty-five grades, the government rifle carrying a charge of 21.5 grains, double that distance is obtained.

A feature of the use of the grenade is that the firing does not in any way injure the rifle, and there is no discernment on the grenade to secure it to the muzzle of the weapon. The rifle can be used for firing ball cartridge for the employment of the grenade.

The grenade was tested in every way conceivable, and a bomb was fired from the butt of target, with a bomb large enough to destroy a battleship. Representatives of several companies was selected for this purpose, and the results were enormous, and it was considered that a strategical position thus attained would be of great value in the event that the latter among the defenders would be appalling.

The effect of the grenade was illustrated when one was fired by the fire at a target and four feet from the ground. The walls of the in were of twelve inch concrete, and the grenade penetrated and exploded in the two solid sandstone slabs, each of which was three feet thick, and the explosion lifted the slabs bodily in the air, and the fragments were scattered in all directions. The grenade also used as points where there were double thickness.

Lands a Zebra.

Lions and leopards are regarded as very dangerous, but she killed one lion, by the killing elephant, buffalo, rhinoceros, hippopotamus and every variety of antelope. Lady Grizel is required to be paid by each "gun," and even then only one specimen of each species is allowed, with the exception of some of the commoner sort of which a number may be killed during the season, and all skins for exportation containing the head must be paid for. There are no limits applied for this purpose. There is no restriction regarding the shooting of cows by settlers. Lady Grizel, and the party generally, are entitled to kill without limit, by the game laws, but they kill twenty-five specimens, including the heads of many of these have been mounted.

Among the big game which fell to Lady Grizel's rifle were one rhinoceros, one hippopotamus, one buffalo, one zebra (an animal difficult to kill from his speed and nervousness), one harteheest (a heavy antelope of somewhat low build), one wildebeest, very remarkable for the rate of hair on its throat and knee, one eland (a fine animal, some to resemble a cow), one oryx, one gazelle, and one Grant's gazelle. Lady Grizel and one Grant's gazelle. Lady Grizel Hamilton declares that the trip was altogether one of the most delightful possible.

STEAMER LOST; 10 DROWN.

GERMAN CROWN PRINCE FLIES WITH ZEPPELIN

Heir to Throne Sails Among Clouds in Count's Dirigible Balloon—His Second Flight.

Berlin, Nov. 7.—Crown Prince Frederick William made an excursion today with Count Zeppelin in the dirigible airship Zeppelin I. There were twelve other passengers aboard with the Crown Prince.

This is the second time the Prince has sailed the clouds and he has become extremely interested in aerial navigation. Previously accepting the honorary presidency of the Aero Club of Germany he has been a frequent passenger with balloons.

The former ascent of the Prince was in military balloon No. 1 at Tegel. He went with Major Gross and made a most successful flight, remaining aloft some time and manoeuvring the big air craft with great skill. He also went up under the military balloon, Parseval, and forced the pilot of the latter to make another landing place

ELECTION OVER PEOPLE NOT AFRAID TO BUY PIANOS

Business is pouring in upon us—People who have been afraid of the future have been holding back, thinking that they might not be able to meet payments, but now all uncertainty is over, and from all indications we are going to have prosperity with a rush—The mills are opening, the factories are going back to full time for all departments and business is already brisker all over the country—Buy at once, while prices are at the lowest in the history of the piano business—We will help this administration to whip the Trusts—Especially the bad Trusts—Help yourself by helping us in our fight with the Piano Trust. Remember—any make piano you wish at double cut prices.

WE WILL PAY SPOT CASH FOR PIANOS ANYWHERE TRUST PIANOS PREFERRED

$5 Down—$1 a Week The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high-priced salesmen, their callers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

BATTLESHIP NORTH DAKOTA READY FOR LAUNCHING.

Biggest Warship Takes Plunge at Fore River Yards Tuesday.

OUTCLASSES MONSTER.

Is First United States Sea Fighter More Powerful Than Dreadnaught.

GOV. BURKE TO ATTEND

Chief Executive of Namesake State, His Staff and Friends Coming.

The battleship North Dakota, the first in the United States navy to exceed in power of the famous dreadnaught class, will be launched at 12 noon Tuesday from the Fore River Ship Building Company yards, Quincy. She is the largest and most powerful battleship ever launched.

When she is launched she will be the biggest thing afloat and exceed in power and speed any vessel of the British navy. The hull had been practically completed for some time, but the work of installing the great engines and boilers has been delayed. The vessel will have a displacement of 20,000 tons and will be able to develop 24,000 horsepower. She will be 510 feet long, 85 feet wide and 28 feet deep. Her draft will be 24 feet 6 inches. She will have a speed of 21 knots an hour.

Must Make 21 Knots.

The North Dakota is 510 feet long on the load waterline, 518 feet 6 inches over all, 85 feet 2 inches extreme beam, 24 feet 6 inches mean draft, displacement 20,000 tons, and has a normal coal capacity of 2,700 tons. She has 144 fuel oil bunkers, with a total capacity of 1,000 tons. Her engines are to have to make a trial speed, under forced draft specifications, of 21 knots an hour.

The ship will be christened by Miss Mary Benton Burke, daughter of Governor John Burke and staff of that State will attend the launching and special trains have been provided by the company. It will leave the South Station at 9 a. m. Tuesday, and reach Quincy at 10:15 a. m. Invited guests at 10:15 a. m., Tuesday, and reception by the ship's officers in the wardroom. The launching party will go aboard the shipyard the train will return to Boston.

The vessel, which ranks for armor and armament with the most powerful battleships afloat, has been launched sideways, mounted in twelve 12-inch guns, carried in four turrets, three on either beam, one fore and one aft. The secondary battery of the vessel, which will be composed of 16 5-inch guns, is to be carried in broadside turrets, and the remainder behind armored bulkheads. The arrangement of the guns is to be so that they can be worked over the lower deck in the most advantageous manner. The United States Navy and ships copied in the British, Germans and Brazilian broadsides.

In general appearance the vessel is not unlike the other four new and straight keels.

To Have "Peekaboo" Towers.

The main battery of the latest fire control systems will be on the range finding positions on top of lattice work towers, which on completion will give the vessel rather a novel appearance. These towers were originally erected on the men of-war to demonstrate their stability under attack.

In addition to the 12-inch guns mentioned, the vessel will be armed with a secondary battery of nine 5-inch guns and twelve 3-inch guns, and will have four torpedo tubes.

The keel of the North Dakota was laid on the ways of the plant during the month of May, 1906, and the launching will be the first of the three battleships of the North Dakota class to be launched. The Delaware will be launched from the yards of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, and the third vessel, the Florida, will be launched from the yards of the Boston Navy Yard.

Record Building Work.

The remarkable record made by the ship builders in launching the North Dakota in ten and three-quarters months from the laying of the keel on the 16th of December last is noteworthy when it is considered that although two vessels have been launched ahead a battleship has been launched in a shorter period of time than the laying of the keel, and in three cases the percent of completion of the foreign ships was not so great as in the case of the North Dakota, when 9,000 tons of material for the hull of the ship has been delivered. On record the above mentioned and some of the foreign ships, therefore, that the North Dakota was made a world record in the construction of her hull. The North Dakota is to be launched with her full complement of her guns, ammunition and fuel, ready for instant service. She will be one of the most powerful battleships afloat.

The sixth battleship of [illegible] was laid down last February and [illegible] North Dakota comes from her ways as the second weight that ever left the building ways. The weight is estimated at 20,000 tons. The Satsuma is completely armed, will have a displacement of 19,250, as against the 20,000 tons of the North Dakota.

Brazil is building three ships of the dreadnought type in England such as the North Dakota. They are known as the Minas Geraes class. The first ship when completed [illegible] in Japan should pay them [illegible] for Japan would give [illegible] a great advantage in ships of the line and armor over the United States.

Indies show that by March 31 Great Britain will have nine ships of the Dreadnought type, and the United States two. In that month the British Admiral will have twelve, Germany four, Japan four, the Austro-Hungarian navy three, and Italy will leave Japan our superior by two. The insurgent power in the South American states have fourteen dreadnoughts, Japan the second most powerful navy in the world, Brazil the fifth, Argentina sixth, France seventh, and Italy probably eighth.

PRESIDENT TO BACK ROOT FOR SENATE

White House Plans Made to Force His Election as Platt's Successor.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Washington, Nov. 7.—It became known at the White House today that President Roosevelt and President-elect Taft have practically agreed upon the election of Elihu Root as United States Senator from New York, to succeed Thomas C. Platt.

It is understood that the President-elect has given a favorable opinion as to the selection of Mr. Root, and it is said that Governor Hughes of New York [illegible] to the Republican legislature in favor of Root. It is known to the [illegible] that Mr. Taft is known to consider leaving in this plan [illegible] the administration of the Republican party behind the success of Mr. Root.

Mr. Root also is working quietly since there is little further [illegible] that he will be the next Senator from New York. It is said that with Mr. Root [illegible] in power the Boss of the Empire State will not be able to dictate to the Republican party in New York as he has done in the past.

The post of arbitration is to be borne jointly by the union and the company. The election comes out of a request [illegible] the street railway companies for a [illegible] reduction of one cent on the fare. [illegible] which was later withdrawn and [illegible] to offer a plan by which the fare [illegible] to remain in force another year. The men, [illegible] to accept the proposition, [illegible] a wage according to [illegible] cents an hour, [illegible] cents an hour while the [illegible] cent fare from the city [illegible].

After fifteen minutes of play, Cutler delivered a successful punt-kick for fifty-three yards and Corbett immediately followed with a forward pass, which went through left tackle for a touchdown. Cutler lost the goal. In the next five minutes the Indians, by an isolated succession of brilliant plays, got their ball to the Crimson three yard line, but, trying to work a left end circuit, were compelled to try a forward pass, which gave Harvard the ball. Then, by steadily advancing rush across the field, twice set back by Balentine's long kicks, Leslie was able to score a touch-down, and McKay kicked the goal.

Boots Ball Sixty Yards.

In the second half the Indians took a brace and it was a close contest until towards the close. Once Beaupré booted the ball sixty yards, and he and Hogue forced Harvard back, so that the pigskin bounded and rolled seventy yards from the Harvard thirteen-yard line. Here the doughty Redskins made a supreme effort.

They hurled the Crimson back for a loss and on a Harvard kick, tried a goal from placement, failed, netted the ball on the Harvard one-yard line. There the Crimson held fast and a minute later, Cutler, with the ball under his arm, was running like a greased pig around right end. He had forty-seven yards to go when his wonderful speed began to tell. Beaupré, neatly gathered by Pisk, Harvard's quarterback, rounded the Indian end, gave Leslie the opportunity to score another touchdown and McKay kicked the goal and shortly afterwards the game was ...

Harvard received it on her forty-yard line and, commencing a series of battering rushes through the line, which quickly ripped the Indians' formation to shreds, the Indians forty-five yard line. Here the Indians presented a wall of steel and refused judgment by making an on-side kick. A grand rush followed the ball and it was on the Indians twenty yards.

A couple of forty-yard forward passes put the Harvard ...e of the ball on the Indians' ten-yard line, and, after unsuccessfully trying to work ... ...ugh the line, Harvard was penalized for holding.

Corbett's Great Run.

Corbett was given the ball and found an opening through the left side of his line and, squirming through the Indians right and left, eluding the outstretched arms of the Redmen as they failed to reach him.

Corbett never stopped running until he cleared the Indian's goal line and he was the hero of the moment.

It was a cinch for Hogue and McKay almost, but the five points on Corbett's touchdown were the only ones the Indians were destined to see. The ball only sailed 25 yards, and the Indians were entrusted with a vengeance, making the best stab of the day to prevent being blanked. In three rushes they were on Harvard's 30-yard line. Then the Indians resorted to a delayed second pass, Captain Wauseka taking the ball and going down the field nearer the Harvard goal. There was more disaster for Harvard when Thorpe got through right tackle and ran for 12 yards, getting around the Harvard end. Right here the Indians displayed the poorest kind of generalship and failed to take the chance for a score. After one rush, which netted about a foot of ground, they tried a forward pass, but the Harvard forwards were through on him and his aim was poor and the ball being caught by Cutler. He ran back to the field fifty yards before he was brought to earth by Gardner.

Cutler's run proved nothing, as the Indians were given the ball on Harvard's twenty-five yard line. Another forward pass, when everybody was looking for a try for goal, and the ball rolled into Mc-Kay's arms on Harvard's twelve yard line. Cutler then put the Crimson back on the ...ard line after an exchange of kicks. Harvard was moving toward the Indian's goal when the game ended, with the ball thirty yard line before Cutler got off an ...ble kick.

Crimson's Forward March.

The Indians kicked to middleton, where Cutler ran it back fifteen yards and then started the forward march that gave the team for a touchdown. The Indians' line was the paper for the Crimson half back. Corbett went out of tackle to tackle, the goal line was crossed, Long replaced by Leslie. White went over finally when Harvard suggested it and McKay kicked the goal.

Harvard's only score in the second half came near the end of the period and was the result of a Brown-Cutler punt for fifty yards around right end from a delayed pass going to the Indian's 30-yard line. Only once ...ring in the smashing method for Harvard ...o make the rest of the distance for a score.

"ALCO" LIKE OLD BERLIET.

What to some has given the impression of three being a new car in the field is the increasing repetition of the name "Alco." The explanation of it is that the American Locomotive Company is introducing a new line cap on its 1909 cars, across the centre of which appears the initials of the company name A. L. C., which spells Berliet, formerly. Something of the Indian's pluck is going to the Locomotive car in name, known by this conversion of initials into a name. The "Alco" is said to be still practically the "Berliet," in design and quality.

PROMINENT TERRIER SHOW ENTRIES

BOSTON TERRIER SHOW THIS WEEK

Dog Fanciers Will Gather Around Ring From All Parts of Country.

There will be a great gathering of Boston terrier fanciers this week for the four-day bench show of the Boston Terrier Club at Mechanics Building, Wednesday to Saturday, inclusive. In the one ring of the show there will be entered dogs from all parts of the country, to compare notes with their brother terrier admirers and strengthen their kennels.

The club's bench show committee, of which Dr. Wherry is chairman, has developed the exhibit with the best ever known, the number of entries is larger than for several years, the specials are many, the classes are larger than ever offered before and the quality entered is above the general high average.

Many notables will be benched during the show, being Champion Dude Ardeu, from New York; champion Fad Jr., from Chicago, champion Chapel Beach, from New York, and champion Pagen, from Brooklyn.

The club was organized in 1892 and for the past ten years it has held consecutive annual shows, being the only exclusive club in the country to hold regular shows for Boston terriers.

The President, Dwight E. Bullard, has entered himself in the first class in several sessions. Rumor has it that the president has no different records, and is confident that he will be a winner in the good class and he is counting on walking off with first honors in his class.

The prizes have been on exhibition in a Washington street window for the past week and have attracted much attention. Liberal cash prizes are offered and will be from the best Boston terriers. STATE AUTOISTS WANT JUST LAWS

Association to Work Hard This Year to Improve Interest of Motorists.

By J. C. KERRISON.

It is the intention of the board of directors of the Massachusetts State Automobile Association to now become more powerful, than ever before, to exert every energy to advance the general welfare of motorists, to secure just laws and to see that they are properly enforced. Since the beginning of the present year the association has been growing in strength and influence, and the present board of directors is determined that the progress of the past shall be more than equaled in the future. The association has a membership of over 2,000 persons, and it is the aim of the present board to increase this number to 5,000 before the end of the year. Hammering Out the Problems

The Nation Is a Great Anvil; Humanity Is the Power. We Are Hammering Out the Future on This Anvil Nation of Ours

ELECTION time has gone by once more; there is disappointment for some of us, and gratification for others.

We can all return now to real life, real work, the work that lasts forever, the work of construction, improving.

This nation of ours is an anvil. And on the United States anvil, as on others among civilized people, human beings, human intelligence hammer out the big problems.

Every man does his share of the work, each is an atom of force that helps to build up the power of the race.

"The weakest among us," says Ruskin, "has a gift, however seemingly trivial, which is peculiar to him, and which, worthily used, would be a gift also to his race forever."

The gift that each of us brings to the race gives the power to the hammer in this picture. Everything is power in the intellect of man. Each citizen, if he uses worthily his power of thought, of inspiration, is a builder of the future.

* * *

We must all realize that this nation IS an anvil for the hammering out of problems. We are not put here simply to enjoy ourselves, to make money, to leave it to our children, to wear fine clothes, and finally to sink into the ground in a beautiful silver plated coffin.

This wonderful land is not a mere gift to the material side of men. It was not created merely to fatten them and make them wealthy.

Our nation is our anvil, and our pride should be in working out with thought, labor and patience the problems as we meet them, forging a future worthy of the human race.

There are other anvils and hammers hammering away. The German nation is a great one, and France is another. Each nation works on the whole for the betterment of all humanity. Each hammers at its task, forging the new idea; each gives to ALL every new thought and new invention.

The peoples of the earth to-day are, in their important work, brothers engaged in friendly useful rivalry. They are destined one day to be one great united family, and that day may not be so very far off.

More and more men are beginning to feel that brotherhood is the permanent, destiny of man—war and hatred are passing, savage monstrosities. We see proof of this in our biggest, strongest and seemingly most selfish men now. They fight for wealth, gather it at any cost—yet within them there is a growing sentiment that makes them GIVE AWAY their wealth almost as eagerly as they gather it.

Nations at one time met face to face only when they met to murder each other on the battle field. Now they meet in peace conferences, in friendly international games, in travel that mixes up travellers of all countries that return to their homes with new ideas, new respect for other lands and deeper love for their own.

Progress is steady in the life of this generation, which has been wonderfully rapid. Men travel around the earth in a few days. They talk to each other and recognize each other's voices a thousand miles apart. Men on land talk to their friends on the ocean, sending thought thousands of miles across the water with the tamed power of the very lightning that once only filled men with superstition.

Men cannot long remain apart, the earth cannot long behold human beings fighting each other, when every day the genius of man brings men closer together, makes them depend upon each other, enables them to help each other.

* * *

Life is interesting and beautiful when we look at our earth and our humanity as a whole. Think of this beautiful planet, bathed in the sun's light and warmth, sailing majestically in its wonderful spiral course through infinite space! What a glorious home for the genius of man! What a glorious privilege to belong to the race of men, a race MASTER OF ITSELF AND OF ITS DESTINY, MASTER OF THIS VERY GLOBE UPON WHICH MAN FIRST APPEARED NAKED, SHIVERING, IGNORANT AND BRUTAL!

Here in America our opportunities are great and our privileges are great. Every American should determine to have HIS force felt in the blows that destiny's hammer strikes upon the anvil. We should all realize that this is THE day, that this is the time for each man to work and do his best. A great thinking American, Emerson, said: "One of the illusions is that the present hour is not the critical, decisive hour. Write it on your heart, THAT EVERY DAY IS THE BEST DAY IN THE YEAR. No man has learned anything rightly until he knows that every day is doomsday."

* * *

Readers, this picture is the best picture of the United States that we have ever seen. We think you will say that it is the best that YOU have seen. It shows a working, thinking race, using its power with this magnificent land as the basis of action. We have one great ocean to the east, a greater ocean to the west, and ahead of us, greatest of all, we have the endless ocean of unlimited, infinite TIME.

Great work will be hammered out on this anvil of ours. We men of to-day little dream of the future that is being wrought, shaped, now, in our time.

The greatest man of to-day in wealth and opportunity would seem a mere beggar compared with the humblest man in the days that are to come.

We are the successors here of red savages that murdered and scalped each other, starved in Winter, gorged themselves in Summer, lived and died with their eyes upon the ground.

We shall have successors compared with whom WE shall seem infinitely lower than the lowest savage compared with us.

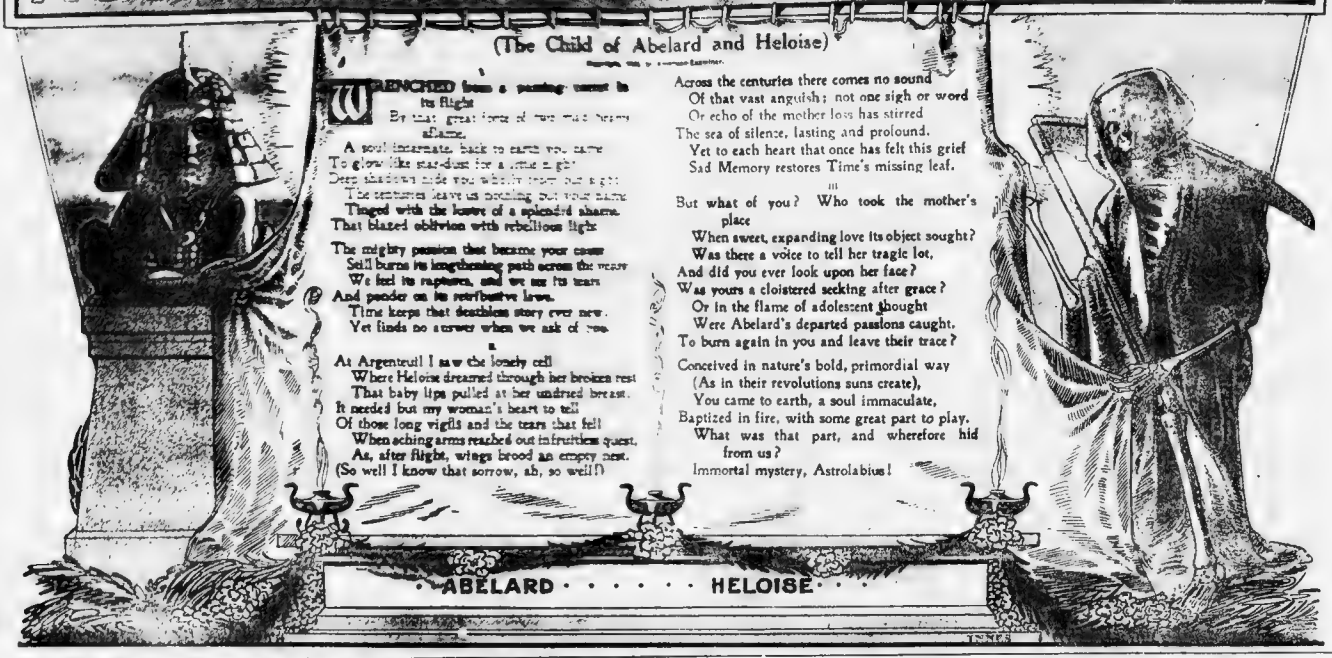
And the creation of that great future race IS OUR WORK TO-DAY. That is the beautiful part of it. We are creating the unbelievably glorious human race that is to come. Just as surely as the great oak is all in the insignificant little acorn, just so surely a glorious human race and human destiny are shut up, confined in the narrow kernel of our small and wretched civilization of to-day.

* * *

Readers, let every one of us do his share. Each of us must live a dual life—first, the life of the individual, meeting the little problems, attending to the little duties in the individual field. And every one of us must live THE LIFE OF THE RACE, working and thinking with the human race, contributing to that greatest power in the world, HOPE, ASPIRATION, FAITH in the destiny of man.

"I slept and dreamed that life was Beauty;
I woke and found that life was Duty.
Was then thy dream a shadowy lie?
Toil on, sad heart, courageously,
And thou shalt find thy dream to be
A noonday light and truth to thee."

ASTROLABIUS — by ELLA WHEELER WILCOX



(The Child of Abelard and Heloise)

Wrenched from a passing comet in its flight
By that great force of two mad hearts aflame,
A soul incarnate, back to earth you came
To glow like star-dust for a little night.
Deep shadows hide you while I muse and grieve
The centuries leave us puzzling but your name
Tinged with the lustre of a splendid shame,
That blazed oblivion with rebellious light.

The mighty passion that became your cause
Still burns its lengthening path across the years
We feel its rapture, and we see its tears
And ponder on its retributive laws.
Time keeps that deathless story ever new.
Yet finds no answer when we ask of you.

II

At Argenteuil I saw the lonely cell
Where Heloise dreamed through her broken rest
That baby lips pulled at her undried breast.
It needed but my woman's heart to tell
Of those long vigils and the tears that fell
When aching arms reached out in fruitless quest,
As, after flight, wings brood an empty nest.
(So well I know that sorrow, ah, so well!)

Across the centuries there comes no sound
Of that vast anguish; not one sigh or word
Or echo of the mother loss has stirred
The sea of silence, lasting and profound.
Yet to each heart that once has felt this grief
Sad Memory restores Time's missing leaf.

III

But what of you? Who took the mother's place
When sweet, expanding love its object sought?
Was there a voice to tell her tragic lot,
And did you ever look upon her face?
Was yours a cloistered seeking after grace?
Or in the flame of adolescent thought
Were Abelard's departed passions caught,
To burn again in you and leave their trace?

Conceived in nature's bold, primordial way
(As in their revolutions suns create),
You came to earth, a soul immaculate,
Baptized in fire, with some great part to play.
What was that part, and wherefore hid from us?
Immortal mystery, Astrolabius!

THE BOOK OF BORES — THE HUMORIST — By Dorothy Dix

THE Humorist can only be likened to the tiger, the lion and other ferocious beasts of prey that are highly interesting, very admirable and exceedingly valuable when confined in a menagerie, but that fill the beholder with terror and carry devastation in their wake when they are roaming at large

Shut a Humorist up between the covers of a book or magazine and he is a perpetual source of delight. Turn him loose upon a community, and at his approach the bravest flee to the nearest saloon, as to a City of Refuge, and seek to fortify themselves with strong drink against the sufferings they know themselves about to undergo.

For the Funny Man has got them. The Wag is about to begin Wagging, and the only known antidote is Fire Water, and plenty of it. This mitigates, if it does not do away with, the pain of being gorged on chestnuts on which you cut your teeth in your cradle. Without this palliative none would be able to endure the agony, and this explains why there are never any Witty Speeches at Prohibition Banquets. They have no Snake Remedy handy.

In describing this pest of society it is but fair to call attention to the fact that the Genuine Humorist is but little to be feared, because (a) it is a very rare animal in this neck of the woods; (b) because its yawps are too valuable to be spraddled around on the general public; (c) because it is under contract with some publisher for 'steen dollars a word.

This particular brand of bore that works such devastation in our midst is a mongrel breed that is technically known as the Near-Humorist, and that is bred by a Jack Ass and damned by everybody that meets it.

There are many different varieties of the Near-Humorist, each one more fearsome than the other. The most common of these is the Pun Maker, who in a single short half hour can torture any able-bodied and intelligent person into insensibility or the mad-house. Fortunately, you can nearly always tell the Pun Maker at sight, and so this gives you a slight opportunity to escape. You may know him by his having, as a usual thing, a large, vacuous countenance, like a cream cheese, a self-satisfied smirk, large ears, and by his wearing a frock coat.

His usual haunt is the church sociable and afternoon tea. His principal victims are women, as few Pun Makers ever dare to attack a husky man the second time, whereas women, lacking muscular strength to defend themselves, are easily preyed upon. No punishment to fit the crime has ever been devised for the punster, but a movement is on foot to get the Government to offer a bounty for his hide.

The next most familiar variety of the Near-Humorist is the Conundrum Asker. This is the lowest known form of animal life, and, like the Pun Maker, its habitat is the rural regions, where a form of social torture known as "evenings" or "companies" prevail. In these places dancing and bridge are considered immoral and all enjoyables pastimes are esteemed wrong, so the Conundrum Asker is employed to reconcile people to the shortness of life and prepare them for the hereafter, a purpose which it admirably fulfils. Few Conundrum Askers, however, ever penetrate into Society, and when they do they are shot on sight, as if one confines one's walks to Broadway one is reasonably sure of escaping this danger.

The third and one of the most ferocious varieties of this beast of prey, is known as the Cut Up. This terrible creature commits the most absurd antics—stands on its head, rolls its eyes, affects to imitate some tragic actor, pretends to weep, speaks in a mincing voice, in a word, does a thousand wearisome tricks that exhaust the beholder. Nothing in the world is so tiresome as the Cut Up, except two of him.

As the Cut Up can be easily detected, even at a distance, by its abnormally swelled head and general way of acting like a fool, it can often be side-stepped by a person of nimble wit. When met face to face it is sometimes possible to quell the brute by looking it coldly and calmly in the eyes, without relaxing a muscle about the mouth when it performs its idiotic little stunts. This method, however, cannot be adopted when the Cut Up happens, as it sometimes does, to be rich and possesses desirable country places and automobiles. Then one can only rely upon the Mercy of Heaven for deliverance.

The Practical Joker is closely akin to the Cut Up. This species of bore differs from all others in that it sets traps for its victims and lures them into them. It is very hard for it to get its only pleasure in something that hurts and humiliates others. It is a malignant fiend unarmed, and cannot stand the treatment it accords others.

Another bloodthirsty variety of Near-Humorist is the Matrimonial Jester. This unfortunate type gets funny at its wife's expense and amuses itself by hooding up to her as a poor, quivering, helpless, defenseless woman, the while it indulges in coarse horse-play. It is generally to be found at its own dinner table, telling how Susie, or Sue, got taken in in a bargain sale, or how the wrong car, or didn't know what a 2-0 rebate was, or something of the kind. People who enjoy seeing a rabbit frightened alive do not object so much to the Matrimonial Jester, but it makes a man who is a Real Sportsman feel like committing murder on the spot.

The Story Telling Bore is another type of Near-Humorist is dangerous in all of its forms, but most ferocious and deadly when it confines itself to repeating comic supplement jokes or retelling good stories of the vintage of last year, or the year before. There are many ancient mariners, old veterans, fishermen and miners who could start a prize graveyard with the remains of those they have bored to death telling about the funny things that happened to them in—etc., etc., etc.

Strangely enough, men are the chief bores in the Humorist line. There are no female Humorists. The few that exist, however, are easily recognized by their long, sharp tongues, that are whetted to a razor edge. Also by the fact that they always flock alone, for, while people may dread a funny man, they flee for their lives from a witty woman.

OTHER FACTS.

A sense of humor is the joker that takes make him think himself funny all the tricks in the game of life.

We forgive those who wrong us, but never those who make us appear ridiculous.

Wit is the sword with which a woman commits hara-kiri.

The practical joker can never see the humor of the joke that is on himself.

Whom the gods would destroy they first

DOROTHY DIX.

"Turn him loose upon a community, and at his approach the bravest flee to the nearest saloon, as to a City of Refuge."

"When met face to face it is sometimes possible to quell the brute by looking it coldly and calmly in the eyes."

The Value of Leisure.

LOOKED at from the daily standpoint, the world's leisure is its most valuable asset. It is something saved from the wear and tear of existence—the mere grind of making bread. The true aim of civilization is not to make but to diminish labor, and the best test of the scale of civilization to which laboring man has attained lies in the uses to which he puts those spare hours which the economy of social living enables him to make peculiarly his own.

The same test of worth applies with even greater force to our rich and leisured classes. "Would you know a man, give him power!" was the old Greek adage. "Would you know a man, give him leisure!" is not less true, seeing that it means almost the same thing, for leisure is indeed an expression of power, either in the individual or in the era from whom it derives. It is wealth of the very finest material—saved-up capital of that imponderable treasure called Time, whose currency is in the blood—promoting not trade merely, but life itself.

It enables a man free from the struggle for existence to show for what end and purpose he is actually called, and to adumbrate to his own person what may be the use to humanity of the removal of that primeval curse under which the world has labored so long—"In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread."

So, whether in the individual or in the State, it is to the voluntary output of hand and heart that we may best look to discover the purpose and tendency of the race; and that voluntary output it has ever found its least hindered expression where men have turned from fear of the enemy without to the enjoyment of the peace and riches of their estate within. In the composition of trade humanity presents, under stress of circumstances, a more or less predestined aspect, but in its results from care we see the expression of its free-will, and at once it rises or sinks in stature, precisely in the degree to which it makes of its leisure an increase of joy and a reason from care.

And that is why Art, publicly applied, has always been so consistent an expression of communal power, and why great states have made the artist himself the chosen medium and interpreter, both of their joy of living and of their reverence for life. All labor that can be done joyously for its own ends has in it an element of pastime, and the artist, however strenuous he his labor, must never be regarded as a laboring man, but rather as one who has received, as a great and honorable trust, license from his fellows to please himself first and foremost, because his self-pleasing is of the kind of real benefit to the race which finds its reward in recreation not of alone but to others.

The true function of the artist is, in fact, the recreation of the community, recreation in the conditions in which a labor should tend, either as recreative itself or as providing facilities toward the end. And if we do not recognize this as applicable to our own day, we do seek it in those past ages which have proved themselves great by making permanent record of the things that be, in their peace, and have honored the practical by names—that of "pure" music—on those whose products can be borne away on a breath and sung as song.

And it is to these players and singers of the human race that we look in order to read true history—a history solid and more embracing than can be found in any state document or official record. For these cultivate purposes exist mainly to conceal it, but the artist cannot lie.

Whether he will it or not he is the civilized plate on which the finances and standards record their impressions, and for obscure will an age is [illegible] ists. They are not to [illegible] present day, not, at all events, [illegible] of material wealth and our population, and the cause I believe largely to be [illegible] of which Mr. Clarke's [illegible] summed up in the phrase "good for trade." Bigger boxes and wrappers for the thing produced may be, as though that could be the true rule and governance of life.

We have multiplied wants without use, we have invented luxuries which destroy the power of labor and bring no joy to the rich, and our civilization has become a vast conspiracy of those who hold in their hands the power of wealth to save time at one end in order that they may kill it at the other. The killing of time is the most terribly driven industry of the present day. We create leisure in order to consume it.

I remember once seriously hurting the feelings of a Socialist friend by declaring that work, apart from production, was an evil, and that if we could not justify our labor by its results play was an infinitely better employment for hand and brain. For what is play but exertion enjoyed for its own sake as a stimulus to health? And what is work without use but exertion sterilized and debased? mere waste not merely of body and physique, but of the brain, which it steadily robs of that faculty for recreative enjoyment for which we should ever be making ourselves more fit.

By Laurence Housman.

or, if by chance it contains some element of skill that gives it interest, then it is but a grosser and heavier form of play, and should be judged as such.

Labor so hard and monotonous that it merely depresses the spirit is an evil which civilization should be ever setting itself to reverse. And, similarly, all forms of pastime which, instead of lightening add to the care of the community are evil. Of these motoring is a typical example. Its main defense is that it is good for trade; but so, in certain directions, is war or any wanton form of sport which causes destruction that has to be repaired. Motoring is just as good for trade in requiring a vast increase of expenditure on road-making as in having called a new industry into life, it employs nearly as many men as has the other. But why m[illegible] desolating in its effects as it is to [illegible] tures consumption for production, [illegible] verts the leisure power of the community into finding expression in the most impermanent of forms. It affects architecture and painting, it affects literature, it affects the church, it affects the theatre.

It all these directions we hear the same cry. The cable is [illegible] [illegible] read less and [illegible] tion cares less for serious drama and [illegible] up the old central interests of home and art in order to spend more on a rapid transit from place to place. Whatever sensations of delight this may produce in the class who have time and money at command, it does not make them more productive in things of permanent good to the community. The power of leisure which they have derived from the labor of others goes not to the erection of monuments, the encouragement of art or to any constructive expression of joy in their freehold on life but to the creation of fresh wants and a constant increase of labor—to more real consumption, to less actual production.

The motor was bound to come. Long before its invention it had grown desirable to the mind of the age. The heart bent on destruction invents projectiles and the machinery necessary to hurl them faster and faster through space. And as we now watch the horrible birth-epidemic of the aeroplane we may well wonder in what new toils this revival of the atomic rage for motion is about to involve the meek upon earth. In the end are we destined to find release and see the elect of the future Zeitgeist caught up in the air, and borne forth [illegible] that exodus from this poor star-[illegible] Whose girth and orbit [illegible] narrow and cramped for [illegible] perhaps [illegible] of comes the love of leisure, [illegible] constructive, will return to [illegible]

Will The Human Race Turn Black? By Prof. Garrett P. Serviss

THE latest tendency in anthropology is to ascribe more and more influence to climate and physical environment in the production of the racial differences among men. The old idea, based on Scriptural interpretation, that the Almighty created some men white, some black, some yellow and some red, and decreed that their descendants should remain of their color, finds no support in scientific investigations. On the contrary, anthropology now teaches that white men may become black and black men white, and not only so, but that changes of climate and environment are capable of altering the physical characteristics of a race in more than the mere question of color. Under such influences men grow tall or short, thin-lipped or thick-lipped, long-nosed or flat-nosed. Thus all the differences of race, it is believed, may be accounted for by the influences of natural surroundings acting for a series of generations upon the same original stock.

The glacial period plays a very singular part in this drama of the development of races, and if, as there is reason to believe, there will be another glacial period in the future the color of the skin and the physiological character of mankind may undergo another great change, and races which are now white, being driven down toward the equator by the invasion of ice from the north, may turn black and become true negroes. In regard to the latest glacial age, which occurred thousands of years ago, a very curious history has been made out by some anthropologists. After the [illegible] ice-sheet had [illegible] and began to retreat again in the opinion of [illegible] president of the Anthropological Section of the British Association, mankind had spread northward, following [illegible] and gradually [illegible] [illegible] although the [illegible] Indo-European [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] organs and [illegible] [illegible] may suppose that the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE FIGHTING HOPE

A gripping, fascinating novel of up-to-the-hour metropolitan life, based on the powerful American drama by William J. Hurlbut, now playing with great success in New York

BY BLANCHE BATES

CHAPTER I.

"Fifteen Years in Sing Sing."

"We, the jury, find the prisoner guilty as charged in the indictment."

The clean, level voice of the foreman cut into the tense stillness like a sharp knife. A pause, a moment's pleasant stealing tight enough to hurt—then a blessing groan, as a giant wounded, and the hoarse, yelping roar of an outraged mob, as the little man at the prisoner's table sprang to his feet shrieking:

"I am innocent! Innocent! They are railroading me to save the thief! The real thief; the big thief higher up! I am going to prison for Burton Temple's crime, and so there is a God above I am innocent!"

Then, whirling, the little man suddenly collapsed and fell forward on the prisoner's table, his head on his crossed arms, sobbing hysterically.

But the appeal had done its work. The pent up indignation of that crowd, scarce held in check through the weeks of an exciting trial, now burst in a concerted roar of fury.

"Temple! Temple! Get Temple, the thief! Granger is innocent! Get Temple! He stole our money! Get him!"

They surged forward against the rail, shrieking, shaking their fists, trying to get over to where the big, broad, square-jawed man stood beside the District Attorney's table facing them.

In vain the judge pounded for order. The noise of the gavel could not be heard. The jurymen cowered in the box, afraid for what they had done.

But Temple, the big man, president of the Gotham Trust Company that had failed through dishonesty, stood with level eyes contemptuously facing the people who had heard his record officially cleared in court through the conviction of Robert Granger, his cashier.

Then, at the height of the excitement the reserves arrived. The fat, harmless bombastic court squad officers, kept in ray berths by political influence, had been powerless, but these husky, blue-coated fellows from the street, who surged in through the doors on both sides of the courtroom, were of a different breed.

"Clear the courtroom!" shouted the judge.

And with nightsticks drawn the reserves went at the crowd. The people fought and struggled, but it was no use. The trained attacks of the force drove them back. Half a dozen officers with drawn clubs surrounded Temple as a guard.

"I don't need you!" he shouted indignantly, but the big sergeant only laughed at him.

"Sure, but if they only blacked your eye Mr. Temple, I'd be better satisfied, and I will just stay with you for company's sake! Come on!"

In spite of Temple's protest they hurried him toward a side door

Granger, the prisoner, had been already seized by two big policemen and hustled toward the door which led to the Bridge of Sighs, over which all prisoners have to pass from the Criminal Courts Building in New York City to the grim Tombs prison.

Five thousand enraged people in the street below the bridge were waiting, and as they saw the shadow of the prisoner and his guards pass the windows, they cheered Granger to the echo. Then their cheers were suddenly changed into yells of execration as a squad of police, picked men of the force who knew no fear, filed out of a side door having in their midst Burton Temple, the victor—Burton Temple, the Trust Company wrecker—Temple, the regent had decided to be an honest man.

He, too was white, but it was white with pain and rage. There was no fear there. Defiant abandoned, contemptuous, he strode along, looking straight ahead. A police lieutenant and a detective surrounded the automobile. He jumped in. The siren horn howled a defiant blast as The people recognized him.

The car started, and forward in a storm of yells and all the missiles the police could lay hands to, whizzed out of sight. Over in the Tombs they were just locking Robert Granger in his cell, while the Judge and District Attorney had already decided his sentence should be fifteen years in Sing Sing.

The Granger case, just terminated in such a terrific popular protest against the decision of the court, had been in many ways most remarkable. Granger had been cashier of the Gotham Trust Company, a genial, rather shy man, of good breeding and not at all aggressive. He had entered the employ of the Trust Company in a minor capacity, and by sheer hard work and brilliancy had risen rapidly.

Then he had married a girl, he had met in the business college, and they had two children. The little house in Westfield, N. J., was simple for their needs, and the salary which he head of the family drew, while not large according to the standards of New York city, was enough to enable them to live comfortably in the little town, and even to put something by against sickness and that time when little Robert and Harold, the boys, should need money for school and college.

Everybody with whom he came in contact liked Robert Granger. His judgment was known to be good, and he was exquisite by nature to make enemies. In fact, his well-known desire to be liked had more than once brought him a gentle rebuke from Burton Temple, the president of the Gotham Trust Company. Granger was so accommodating that he could not refuse a friend, while Temple, who was hard and forgery through his own efforts was of a different stamp.

Outside of business, Burton Temple is a generous man; but don't waste time trying to beat him in a deal," was the current judgment the Street passed on the president of the Gotham Trust. After many of the wise men of that shrewd quarter had tried it out and failed with.

The Street and the big business men held Temple to be a genius. His successes in the street and the reason of high dividends and always rising quotations according to exchange standards, the public had reason to believe.

And so when, in the autumn of 1907, the Gotham Trust Company, one of the strongest in the city, suddenly went to the wall, the people refused to believe anything but that Temple had been forced to it by others. Even the newspapers, after many of them had printed columns of attack on the president of the Gotham Trust Company, changed their tone when Temple, in person, appeared before the Clearing House Committee and made a clean breast of the whole affair.

Mr. Brady, he said, had come to him with regard to the certification of the check that he had referred the matter to Mr. Temple, and the president of the company had directed him to accede to the request of his friend, Mr. Brady, and grant the favor, even though both knew that the funds Brady had in the trust company did not approach the amount of the check.

The attorneys for Granger, realizing their opportunity, courted the widest publicity. The newspapers took the matter up. It was utterly incomprehensible that a man in the position of Granger, and having Granger's record for honesty and conservative dealing could have dared to take the action he had taken without direct orders from higher up.

President Temple, smiled absolutely giving any order whatsoever to Granger about the matter. Brady quietly withdrew from public notice for a time.

The case came to trial. At the height of the excitement the papers sprang the accusation that Brady had used the money he obtained from the Gotham Trust Company to make good money he had taken from an estate of which he was executor with Burton Temple.

The new evidence came as a shock, but it could not be gotten properly before the jury. Every man in the court room outside the jury box believed that Burton Temple had conspired with Cornelius Brady to loot the Gotham Trust and railroad Robert Granger as the innocent victim. But against evidence directly connecting Burton Temple with the crime was Brady, of the big social set, who would be brought and by social pressure the prosecution's case out of court to get the convicted prisoner as innocent a man who had fought him as the most.

Three days later Robert Granger in Sing Sing had begun serving the sentence of fifteen years, and Burton Temple had started anew to wipe out the shame of a moral conviction.

CHAPTER II.

The Trial After the Verdict.

BURTON TEMPLE did not live in the city. When he began to make his money, he looked around for a place to build a Summer home, where he and his mother might live during the greater part of the year. It so happened he finally chose a beautiful spot on the Hudson, only about a mile or so from the State Prison. Little did they then what that sinister position might mean in the days to come.

As soon as Robert Granger had been convicted, Temple began to feel the pressure of public opinion upon himself. His friends, at first loyal and hearty, began to show him They were still courteous and polite, but not in the genial, hearty way of days gone by.

Even his more business associates many of whom knew they had done worse things than the crime of which Temple was accused, now looked upon him askance. The world in general had begun to put the rich man where the world felt he belonged —in a place apart. Certain of Temple's associates, officially, a prisoner serving sentence for a shameful crime.

And when the big, square-jawed president of the Gotham Trust Company did not mind this treatment it aroused him in a terrific way. Then it began to get on his nerves—this unconscious, involuntary attitude of all the people he knew or met—this putting him away from them.

His fighting qualities were aroused. He determined he would show them he was not a man to be thus pushed with.

But all the efforts of the big financier proved vain. He found it was one thing to beat a man in a deal, and another thing to gain his respect.

His business, built up on sound, conservative judgment, went on prospering, but all his friendships, all his social alliances, seemed hopelessly wrecked. He was a prisoner of public opinion with, apparently, a life sentence to serve.

"I wouldn't mind it so much if they would only give me a chance," Temple complained to his friend and confidante, Mrs. Marshall Craven. "None of them knows whether or not I am guilty. Half of them don't tell what crime was committed. But here I am condemned unmercifully put me in jail, shut me off from all the decencies of life, when, with my own funds I'm trying to discover the author of not I am guilty."

Craven, a shrewd, bald headed, cynical old bachelor lawyer, with a sharp tongue and a brusque manner to hide the kind heart in him, laughed grimly at his friend's complaint.

"Sure, you're guilty, old man," he answered. "You are guilty of the greatest crime in this country—the crime of being rich. All you have to do now is you've deserve a fair sentence is to have a million dollars, so you can serve only half a dozen fall sentences ahead of you."

Well, I'm going to show them," blurted Temple. "They may think they have me. They may sympathize with Granger if they please, but the time is coming when I'll show them who is the real thief in a string there, have to be wise."

The shrewd old lawyer thought a long time before he answered.

"There are times to do it he said at last, "but Granger is a game. It will be a hard fight. You don't dare to do it unless it is a sure thing. Really, the fate of a king, the fate of a nation, may hang on your action. Remember, you've got to do it by showing Brady up. Now, how are we going to do it?"

Temple sank back in his chair and watched the room half a dozen times before replying.

"We've got to get into his office, but not just now," he said at last. "I have a plan up. Well have to get a man in there who is clever enough to do the work. Brady and Granger were evidently in the same deal. Brady must have left some papers behind. Let will tell us all about it. One of them must have that paper and we can't rule to hold over the other."

If Temple knew Granger's guilt as he had, he wouldn't be in jail today. Brady, the man who left the city of a week ago, had come back, trusting all to

THE GOLD WATCH AND CHAIN

BY FERENCZ MOLNAR

The Man Who Wrote "The Devil."

(Translated from the Bohemian by Eugene Lucas.)

SCENE—Interior of a middle class flat, whose tenant, a widow with one grown son, has lately died. It is the day of the funeral and the rooms are vacant. Later the janitress. She stops on the threshold and looks around with emotion, shaking her head sadly, putting a corner of her apron to her eyes. With a few gulps she manages to swallow her grief and goes through the rooms, figuring everything. She is an honest woman, but it is too much to allow any small article of value to be left lying about, so she puts it in her pocket. She goes to the kitchen and is content with the old conviction that all the smaller articles have been carried off already by the kitchen maid. She wears black, and her eyes are red from weeping.

MAID—Madame! Why are you here? What are you looking for?

JANITRESS—I have just come to see how your folk are coming back from the cemetery. I have come up to put the rooms in order. Is not that proper?

(The Maid begins to weep. There is a long pause.)

JANITRESS—My dear girl, now I am here I remember that my soup strainer is worn out. Now, if per[haps] there is one here, then—you see you have no one now to strain soup for——

MAID—It is not permitted to take away anything at all. The son of the old lady is still here and he makes me accountable for everything.

(She goes into the closet where she has hidden away the soup strainer. The relatives and friends of the deceased widow are heard coming up the stairs. They enter.)

THE SON—Have seats. Mary, is there anything to eat?

(The Maid goes about with a sorrowful face among the kinsfolk.)

MAID—Some preserved fruit—

FIRST LADY—Very well; just bring it over here. Is there much preserved fruit?

MAID—We have about twenty jars.

FIRST LADY—Poor Aunt Louise! She was so orderly. Put, my dear child, about five jars in a basket. I want to take them as a remembrance.

(She weeps.)

THE SON—Leave me alone, leave me alone!

(He sits in a corner on the couch and gazes into the air. A low toned conversation ensues among the others. The women walk in and out of the room.)

SECOND LADY—[illegible] Death is a sad thing.

THIRD LADY—To the end of the world.

(The son gets up, goes to the cabinet and opens its doors. He takes out a chest in which contains different small things—rings, clasps, fancy buttons, a lady's hat band, a few brooches, a bracelet, a gold watch [illegible] hours all these things on the table.)

THE SON—I took souvenirs of the blessed departed of each of you.

(Silence at first. No one dares to touch the precious things.)

FIRST LADY (going to the table and fingering the souvenirs)—The poor old lady! She had everything——

(She looks with delight at the watch and chain.)

SECOND LADY—I—I want only a small, worthless thing—this button—or, rather, this clasp.

(She looks at the watch.)

THIRD LADY—Aren't you taking the clasp?

SECOND LADY—No.

(She thinks that in case she takes the clasp, she will lose even the hope of getting the watch.)

FOURTH LADY (to a little girl)—Julie, here, you take this clasp. It belonged to poor Aunt Louise.

(She accidentally tore the clasp to the cloth and thereby voiced out a valueless thing from [illegible].)

SECOND LADY—How about the button, is yours, too.

JULIE—The [illegible].

(She looks at the valuables.)

FIRST LADY—Who wants the bird?

(Silence. No one wants to hazard her right to the watch by accepting the [illegible]. The thought arises in all that the watch will remain to the [illegible] only she who presents herself last will get it. Accordingly, etc.)

THIRD LADY—Juliet, you don't want this bird, do you?

JULIET (gazing at the watch)—No. I even give the clasp back, and also the button.

(She puts the button and clasp back quickly.)

SECOND LADY—No, that cannot be. The clasp and button are yours. (Hands them to Juliet.) You must take what you have got. There must be no picking out, here—aren't you ashamed of yourself?

(Juliet begins to weep. She takes the clasp and button, being aware that all her chances for the watch are gone.)

JULIET—Now then—then I shall ask for the bird, too.

(Hastily three of the ladies thrust the bird on the child. With Juliet the question is made and she retires. A pause.)

FIRST LADY—What a cute little watch!

SECOND LADY (to the son)—Listen, of course you will keep the watch.

THE SON—No, I don't keep anything at all.

(The ladies crane about the table.)

FIRST LADY (takes the watch in her hands)—A beautiful little watch. (She picks up the chain, too.) And what a neat little chain! Of course it belongs to the watch?

ALL THE LADIES—Yes, yes! Attach the chain to the watch.

(Each thinks that she may get the watch, and, in that case, it is much better if the chain is on it. The other has the same feeling, therefore she suddenly hooks the chain into the watch ring.)

THIRD LADY (somewhat nervously)—Very nice—But now, put it down, put it down.

FIRST LADY (still holding watch and chain)—Poor Aunt Louise! She always wore it. You remember how smart this thin little gold chain looked against her black silk gown? She wore it like this, did she not?

(She tries it on. General consternation.)

THIRD LADY—Oh, yes—something like that— But—put it down!

FIRST LADY (takes off the chain from her neck, but it still remains in her hands)—She got this from her deceased husband.

THIRD LADY—Yes—yes—but put it down!

SECOND LADY—Why don't you put it down, since everybody calls upon you to do so.

A SKINNY WOMAN—Here is a black skeleton bracelet. A mourning bracelet—who wants it?

(Nobody says a word.)

Here is a souvenir brooch. Who wants it?

FIRST LADY (with elaborate kindness)—Take [illegible].

SKINNY WOMAN—Oh, such trifles are not for me. I'll give the brooch and bracelet back. I want a nice little watch. Let me see it. I want to see it myself.

THIRD LADY (to First Lady)—Give it to her.

OTHER LADIES—Give it to her; give her a chance to look at the watch.

(They are figuring that the lady has held the watch too long in her hands, and that it will be in less danger in the hands of the skinny woman.)

FIRST LADY (surrenders the watch, but keeps the end of the chain in her hands)—It has a double cover.

SKINNY WOMAN—Let go the chain.

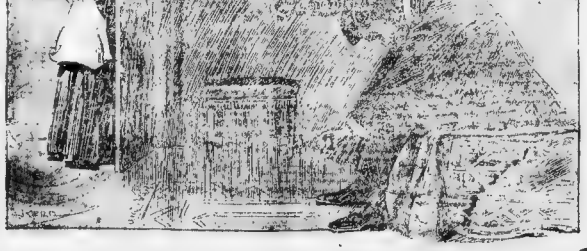
FIRST LADY—Why can't you see it this way?

(The chain breaks. General consternation.)

SKINNY WOMAN—Now, you've broken it.

FIRST LADY—You have broken it yourself.

SKINNY WOMAN—Me? How can you say such a thing?



"Only the son of the dead and buried woman remains to weep alone in a corner of the couch. It is growing dark. The maid lights the lamp."

"First Lady (surrenders the watch, but keeps the end of the chain in her hands)—It has a double cover.
"Skinny Woman—Let go the chain.
"First Lady —Why, can't you see it this way?
"(The chain breaks. General consternation.)"

(In a minute she is aware that the larger part of the chain and the watch remain in her hands and that they might be worn even thus.)

FIFTH LADY (speaking for the first time)—Where is the souvenir brooch?

(But she reaches for the watch.)

SKINNY WOMAN—No, no, no! Don't be in such a hurry.

(She pushes her back.)

FIFTH LADY—Let me see the watch too.

ALL (to the skinny woman)—Give it to her.

(They realize that it is most important that the watch should not be too long in the same hands. Rather should the "outsiders" have it in their hands than those who have shown through their strong interest that they have a claim on it.)

SKINNY WOMAN (giving up the watch)—It has a double cover.

FIFTH LADY (calmly)—Now then, I choose the watch!

(General astonishment that this seemingly difficult case should be thus simply settled.)

FIFTH LADY—Pardon me, but you were asking for the souvenir brooch.

THIRD LADY—Pardon me, but this is not fair.

SECOND LADY—The watch is a valuable thing. One selects only [illegible] bric-a-brac, some souvenir not a gold watch and chain!

FIFTH LADY (calmly putting away the watch)—Now, then, you choose some "bric-a-brac."

(She retreats and goes before the mirror adjusting her hat. The others go to the mirror also. Everybody has left the table, which has now no further interest. They gather around the dexterous lady who has the watch. All look into the mirror, arcing there their own faces.)

FIRST LADY—What shall we take, now that you have taken the best of everything?

LADY WITH THE WATCH—What's the difference? I did not choose it for its value, but simply because somebody had to have it. That's all!

FIRST LADY—At least, give me the chain.

LADY WITH THE WATCH—Why, don't you see it is broken?

(She pulls down her blouse in front with her left hand, and with the right she smoothes it carefully.)

God bless you, my dear Juliet!

THE SON—I kiss your hands, Aunt Toni. I thank you very much for your goodness.

AUNT TONI (for it is she who has the watch)—Don't mention it, my dear son. You know how I loved your poor mother.

(She bursts into tears and leaves the room.)

FIRST LADY—She has taken the watch!

(She is desperate, but nevertheless she pockets the remainder of the chain.)

SKINNY WOMAN—At least the souvenir brooch remains.

(The souvenir has disappeared in the meantime. The mourning bracelet, too. Only the skeleton buttons are left.)

SKINNY WOMAN—Why, there's nothing left for me!

(Juliet becomes afraid somebody will take away from her even what she has. Therefore, she is wise and tries to escape.)

SKINNY WOMAN—Juliet, give me the clasp; you shall have the button and bird.

JULIET—I give you the bird.

SKINNY WOMAN—No, I don't want the bird. Give me the clasp.

JULIET—Now, then, you don't get anything.

SKINNY WOMAN (with a sour face)—All right, then give me the [illegible].

(She puts the glass-eyed humming bird in her reticule and goes away. They all go. In the meantime even the skeleton buttons have disappeared from the table. The flat remains empty, only the son of the dead and buried woman remains to weep alone in a corner of the couch. It is growing dark. The maid lights the lamp.)

THE TEDDY BEARS HAVE A BUSY DAY

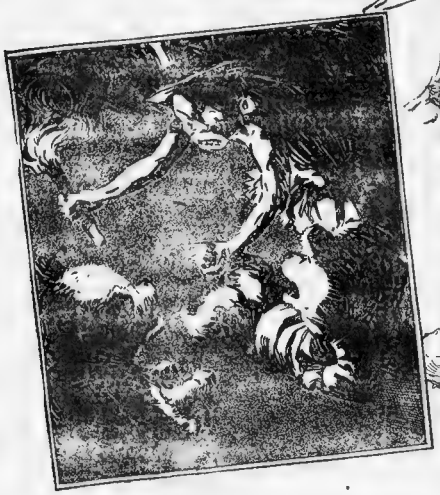
SEYMOUR EATON

DRAWINGS BY C.H. TWELVETREES.

THE Bears were sleeping sound that night
When they were given a sudden fright
By some one tugging at their paws
And showing white teeth in chattering jaws
And dressed in very scant attire
And bearing a torch of spitting fire
And saying, "Get up; come quick; big gun
Crusoe say come; say Bears must run."

The man was Friday, and Teddy-B,
After rubbing his eyes so that he could see,
Said, "Don't look so scared; we're not afraid.
Why don't you ring for the fire brigade?"
Then Teddy-G jumped two feet high
To toss off sparks from paw and thigh,
And said to Friday: "Turn off the light,
Or Crusoe's Isle will see a fight."

But the Bears were joking and when they saw
A fire on the hill of brush and straw
And heard the storm of wind and rain
And smashing trees, a hurricane,
And big guns booming out at sea,



"By some one tugging at their paws
And showing white teeth in chattering jaws."

They guessed the trouble, and Teddy-B
Promised at once that they go too
And do their best to help the crew
To save the ship by the bonfire light
From striking rocks on this awful night

As soon as they reached the bonfire hill
The Teddy Bears worked with a will
At carrying straw and wood supply
To keep the fire going good and high.
Crusoe explained that an hour before
He had heard the signal off the shore
And knew at once that a fire built high
Would light [illegible] rocks and trees and sky
And show the [illegible] like a light-house bright
Just what to do on a stormy night

When morning came the ship was seen
With bow up high and wedged between
Two mighty rocks, her deck swept bare
And not a sailor anywhere

The Bears and Crusoe and Friday, too,
Made up at once a wrecking crew,
And on a raft they pushed their way
From rock to rock across the bay
Till the ship was reached and the raft made fast
By Teddy B to a broken mast
Then Teddy G hand over hand
Climbed up a rope and took his stand
On the deck above and orders gave
To the crew below like a captain brave

Then one by one they came on deck
And looked about to see the wreck.
When Teddy G. proposed they go
To the treasure store rooms down below
[illegible] they went and there they found
A treasure chest weighing a hundred pound,
And boxes filled with things to eat,
Like biscuits, dates and salty meat

Just then a growl and smashing noise
That would scare a Bear as well as boy
Made Friday jump clear out of sight
And gave everyone an awful fright.
The noise came from a room nearby
And sounded like a wild-man's cry.

"The Saint" (authorized version) was a most successful play;
Both houses that presented it turned crowds away each day.
When matinee girls blithely asked for "Good seats, on the aisle,"
The ticket man said, "All sold out," and didn't even smile.

To the box office Winnie came, with face demure and sweet;
She said, "Oh, please, now, can't you find me just one single seat?"
But the hard-hearted ticket man coldly pronounced her doom—
"No. Every seat is taken. There's not even standing room!"

Then Winnie spied the manager, and to him she appealed.
"Who are you, miss? What do you want?" (His scorn was ill-concealed).
"No, ma'am. The house is all sold out six weeks ahead, or more.
There's not a seat! The ticket man has told you this before!"

A most distracting blush appeared on Winnie's flower-like face;
A most distracting little curl came tumbling out of place;
With most distracting gestures she raised each plaintive hand,
And then she slowly smiled!—That manager came all unmanned!

Bang! through the door—straight down the aisle, he ushered Winnie Wynne,
Until he reached his private box and fairly pushed her in!
"Would you—ahem!—er—may I join—Oh, hang it all! I say,
Will you accept this box?" She smiled—and he passed quite away.

So from the manager's own box Winnie surveyed "The Saint."
("It's the best version," some declared, and others said, "It aint!")
Outside, the manager still mused. "Who can she be? Great snakes!
Compared with her my bunch of blondes are pink and white mistakes!"

Winnie's adventures will be continued in next Sunday's Dramatic Section.

"Boston society women are so conservative that they hardly care to own up to the charge, but just the same most of our wealthiest women are suffragettes and do you blame them?" was the answer given by one young matron, an heiress in her own right and an enthusiast on the subject, when questioned as to the truth of the statement that the movement is rapidly gaining ground.

"The Boston girl of wealth is many times in love with some sport or other of her own and many go their own estates and households and get their fairest way, not vote!

"I am sure there are any number of society women and girls who would gladly give their yearly income if they could only be allowed to cast a ballot for candidates along with their votes, and that is no reason why they shouldn't, for they may spend a little too much like women sometimes, but I think, rather spend than don't you? I'm sure Eleanor Sears would be willing to cast a ballot for suffrage if no one else. Who is the Most Beautiful Woman in the World?

"I HAVE never been in America, but many times I have had occasion to contemplate American beauties, and they have made a profound impression on me. Only the women of Italy can be compared with American women. Americans are Amazons. The Italian beauty is more soft. They are human beauties, while the Americans are only beauties."

This is the opinion of the distinguished Italian painter, Caro Delvaille—but do the women of Italy rival the Beauties of America, or even of England?

On this page to-day is presented the portrait of Miss Marion Lindsay, who is one of the most beautiful women in England. Has Sig. Delvaille seen in Italy a face which can overmatch this?

Little Willie Vanderbilt's Unhappy Birthday

WHY HIS DIVORCED PAPA WON'T GIVE HIM HIS USUAL ONE-MILLION-DOLLAR BIRTHDAY PRESENT THIS YEAR

A STRANGE and unique misfortune has overtaken little Willie Vanderbilt, the only son of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, the principal heir of the Vanderbilt fortune.

Ever since he was born little Willie has received a present of $1,000,000 on his birthday, but since his father has been divorced he has decided that he can no longer give his son this handsome present.

Little Willie's seventh birthday occurs on November 24, and then he will miss for the first time the present that papa has been accustomed to give him. Of course the child can hardly understand all that he can do with $1,000,000, but he is old enough to know that it is something very unusual, and to cry when he does not get it.

Alfred Vanderbilt, as most people know, inherited the greater part of the fortune of his father, the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, who was in his time the head of the family. Alfred was the second son, but when his older brother, Cornelius, married against his father's will Alfred became the principal heir.

Then Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt married Miss Elsie French, and they had one son, named William Henry, in memory of his great-grandfather, the oldest member of the family. Alfred was very fond of his little boy at first, and tried to do everything he could for his happiness. Having an almost inexhaustible supply of millions, he decided that it would be a nice thing to give the little boy a million dollars on every birthday. In this way he placed so much money beyond the reach of any financial errors he might make himself, and also saved the great inheritance tax which would have to be paid if the money passed by inheritance. It was understood that Mr. Vanderbilt intended to keep this gift up for twenty-five years, when his son would have as large a fortune as anybody could need. As it was, he kept it up for six years.

Now Mr. Vanderbilt has been divorced from his wife, and he no longer feels the same enthusiasm for his son. Mrs. Vanderbilt possesses the exclusive guardianship of her son. In her suit for divorce she asked an enormous sum, not only for herself, but in order that her son may be brought up in a manner suitable to one who was regarded at his birth as the principal heir of the Vanderbilt fortune. Mrs. Vanderbilt has obtained nearly everything she asked for, and her former husband has now very little to do with his own son.

On the other hand, Mr. Vanderbilt may marry again and have other children in whom he will take more interest, because he is living with them, than in the almost forgotten son by the first marriage. He would naturally wish to make one of these later children the principal heir to his fortune, for the son who may be living with him in the future will be more in harmony with his ideas about the disposition of his wealth. This is given as the reason why he has ceased to give his son by his first marriage the $1,000,000 a year that would have accumulated into an immense fortune during the boy's minority. Mr. Vanderbilt

WHO WILL WIN GERALDINE FARRAR?

News Item No. 1—"Miss Geraldine Farrar and her mother were guests of the Crown Prince and Princess at a dinner at the palace, Potsdam."

News Item No. 2—"Miss Geraldine Farrar is engaged to marry Antonio Scotti, the famous baritone, who has just signed an engagement at the Berlin Opera House."

There is no doubt that Scotti and Farrar are fond of each other, and the opportunities in all the list of marriageable opera stars who have achieved world wide fame. Though a bachelor, instead of the more compelling type, he is an artist exceptionally gifted that few of the world's great tenors have the advantage of him in the way of an airy or polished front.

In the opera of "Faust," for example, Farrar, the prima donna, is forced to share honors with the tenor, Caruso, with Scotti, the baritone, left in the background. The great voice, his handsome and distinguished presence, his histrionic abilities as an actor, Scotti is a thorough musician and a scholar. He is an educated man of good family, and an agreeable acquisition wherever educated and well bred people are brought together.

There are many reasons why almost any woman might fall happy in love with Signor Scotti. In Miss Farrar's case there might be one extra reason, perhaps, that is her self. Ever since they first met as fellow opera artists Scotti's assistance, his advice, the benefit of his long period of study and of experience, have been at her disposal.

It is known in opera circles that Miss Farrar has gratefully accepted the hints, the advice, even the systematic training in certain roles, of her wise and experienced art counselor. It is owing to these associations that the [illegible] of Miss Farrar [illegible] Scotti [illegible] Marguerite in "Faust" [illegible] prima donna in the first flush of a triumphant career, with marriage a matter of [illegible] future, has made [illegible] with Scotti [illegible] Scotti's devotion and evident [illegible] were opposite [illegible] of course. Since New York [illegible] known Dan Scotti has [illegible] been an [illegible] Farrar [illegible] before he and Miss Farrar had met [illegible] Farrar, stepdaughter of Nathalie [illegible] Rives, of New York. The announcement was made by Miss Rives. Miss Farrar's mother. It was not denied, but some months later it was announced that the engagement had been broken off.

The Kaiser sent for her after the first performances, congratulated her warmly, and soon after sent her a valuable brooch [illegible] the Imperial hotel and crown. By the Kaiser's wish she appeared in the big part of Elizabeth in "Tannhauser." The Kaiser sent her congratulations [illegible] I guess I voted [illegible] to the palace to [illegible] for her pictures and introduced her [illegible]

It was useless for Scotti to protest [illegible] had [illegible] no spaghetti since leaving Naples—and yet Scotti and Caruso remained friends.

The Pitfalls of a Woman's Married Life.

By a Wife Who Avoided Them.

You have something which has never been to your life before, if a young bride—the love of a good husband and half of you don't know what to do with it.

It is quite different from any other love in the world. You have been accustomed to your mother's tender, considerate love, or your sister's merry "hail-fellow-well-met" affection, or your brother's boisterous enthusiasm, or your best friend's adoration. They are all different from the husband's love, and yet the good husband binds tenderness, consideration, adoration and fun into the feeling with which he regards the little woman who welcomes him on the door-step and sits at the head of his table.

I can hear some of the women, who have been married some time, high over the shore remark:

"My husband care for me like my mother, or joke with me like my brothers and sisters, or love me like that dear girl. Oh, I wish he did!"

But he did and it is entirely your own fault that he does not now.

Still one as much as you like for the first few days, declare that they are not to be, that all husbands are the same. It makes no difference. I stick to my opinion still.

The saddest mistake a young married woman can make is always to be bickering with her husband.

At first it starts as a sort of joke, and gradually it grows into a habit.

I expect you stay in houses where the husband and wife are continually quarrelling. The wife always has a grievance, and the worst of it is that she starts being offended at breakfast.

Now, do you think that any self respecting man can be bothered with a disagreeable woman at breakfast?

Remember he has lived at home with a kind mother to pour out his coffee, or perhaps in rooms where his newspaper has [illegible] kept him company and newspapers can't be cross, thank goodness.

There are some women who would quarrel with a head before [illegible] for they long to disagree all the time, brush, and the consequence is that the unfortunate husband is made the butt of all their ill humor.

A woman who is always quarrelling with her husband is the saddest creature in the world. If God takes him from her she drapes herself in widow's weeds and cries her eyes out. Do try to be nice to him while he is alive and can appreciate it.

Do you know what the maddest [illegible] is? To be jealous of your husband.

If you had said to him, "What a nice little woman Mrs. Robertson is. Does she dance well?" He would have replied: "Yes, so, darling, but not a patch on you."

I have heard many young wives say: "I wish my husband were as nice to me as [illegible] biggest mistake [illegible] original, and don't

THE MAN WHO STOLE THE EARTH

Most Thrilling Novel of Love and Adventure Since Jules Verne's Masterpiece.

By W. Holt White.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

"The Kaiser went on, raising his voice and banging his fist down on the table."

PART III.

[illegible]

"He will do it to-night," said Miss Hunt, boldly, exactly what he did at Monte Carlo."

"A cheerful prospect, indeed" said the Kaiser.

He then began to ask her a number of rapid questions as the [illegible] shape, size and gauge of the [illegible].

The dimensions and the general aspect of the "Victor" Miss Hunt could not, of course, disguise, but in regard to the [illegible] she could do no more than [illegible].

The Kaiser watched [illegible] of the "Victor's" [illegible] never seen were required [illegible] the like.

But again Miss Hunt knew very [illegible]. The Kaiser was sure that [illegible] soon to see that Miss Hunt was not by any means to [illegible] and so he [illegible] could [illegible] impatiently and took [illegible] across the [illegible] and down [illegible] went and looked out of [illegible] present he came back.

"My dear young lady," he said, "I regret very much to be rude to a lady, but I can pay cannot help it. You must admit [illegible] you have come here on an [illegible] and, [illegible] you must expect a correspondingly [illegible] rate reply. I will [illegible] to [illegible] to leave [illegible] my service. [illegible] I'm, then, that I regard [illegible] as a tremendously [illegible] and low-[illegible] man. It is simply preposterous that an [illegible] of the [illegible] should presume to dictate to [illegible]."

Miss Hunt made no bold as to interrupt [illegible].

"I no forget Bomberg," she said.

"Bomb and Bomberg," said the Kaiser, "are utterly unlike. If Mr. Strong sells [illegible] he will meet [illegible] somewhat differ[illegible] to [illegible]. Besides, [illegible] we are not entirely ignorant of [illegible] and gation ourselves. In any case," the Kaiser went on, rising [illegible] and bang[illegible] fist down on the table, "I do not consent [illegible] interest. I do not consent [illegible]. It's fellow sitting [illegible] [illegible] remaining murder [illegible]."

Surely it comes to the same thing," urged Miss Hunt.

"You are a bold advocate" said the Kaiser "but I should advise you to [illegible] dissuade Mr Strong from his [illegible].

"You have full permission," continued his Majesty, "to leave the country [illegible] and I will request you to do so at once; but—and here his voice grew more [illegible] I [illegible] you, if you [illegible] in Germany again [illegible] no better."

Miss [illegible] was rising [illegible] angry [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

MASKED NIGHT RIDERS GATHERING AT THE RENDEZVOUS AT A FORKED TREE

COPYRIGHT F.A. KNIGHT

A Cotton Warehouse and Bales of Cotton Set on Fire by Night Riders.

Mrs. C. C. Huey, the Tennessee Widow, the Only Person Who Has Successfully Defied the Night Riders.

Widespread Outbreaks of the Night Riders in the South and the Efforts of Governors and Militia to Suppress Them.

THE climax of the outrages of the Night Riders of the South was said Sunday, but told the lawyers that they reached about two weeks ago when they were so closely associated with Judge Captain Quinten Rankin, of Trenton, Tennessee, was lynched and shot at Reel Foot Lake.

Only by a miracle did his friend and law partner, ex-Judge R. Barbary Taylor, escape by plunging into a swamp pond and swimming away in the darkness through a rain of bullets.

When he reached Tiptonville and told his story it revealed a state of outlawry in the South that is almost incredible.

The two lawyers, Captain Rankin and Judge Taylor, had gone to Reel Foot Lake on business to bring from J. C. Carpenter, an attorney of Dalton City, who said some fertile wanted to lease some timber lands. The lawyers drove over from Dalton City Monday afternoon, and went to the Ward Hotel, at Walnut log, near the lake.

Captain Rankin and Judge Taylor had separate beds in the same room. There was no lock on the door.

About midnight there was a knock on the door, and without waiting an answer it was opened and several masked men stepped in. The men pointed guns at the lawyers and told them both to dress.

The lawyers took in the situation and very few words were said. After dressing they were taken from the hotel about half a mile down the road near the banks of the lake. They walked between small bands of men, and had no chance to talk with each other.

They had no idea that great violence was intended, but supposed that they would be whipped and turned loose with a warning.

The outlaws at one before I reached the opposite shore."

"Instead of climbing the bank, I hid behind a log which afforded excellent concealment. Hearing no noise in the undergrowth the desperadoes thought I was killed, and shortly afterward left, for I heard one of them say, 'He's dead, let him go.'

"I remained behind the log for perhaps ten minutes and then hid in the underbrush until daylight. The water had stopped my watch, the hands showing that it was 1:05 a. m. when I leaped into the water.

"At daylight I struck out and walked until night, stopping once in a while to rest. I slept all night in the woods, and this morning came to South Landing, where Luther Rankin, a fisherman for Judge Harris, gave me shelter and toe-housed of my safety to Tiptonville.

Judge Taylor believes the outlaws are squatters about Reel Foot Lake who are incensed at being deprived of fishing rights in the lake through legal processes procured by the West Tennessee Land Company, assisted by Captain Rankin and Judge Taylor to take over the property and reclaim it from the insubordinate squatters.

The entrance of the aged lawyer into Tiptonville that morning was tragically dramatic. His hair, gray before, had turned white as the result of his fearful experience with the Riders, and his terrible exposure to the elements for the twenty-four hours when he was lost in the swamps as he struggled on his way back to safety. His body bore countless bruises and scratches from thorns and the stings of insects; his clothing was torn to shreds.

"My most natural thought was to save myself. As soon as I thought that the mob had captured their guns I leaped into the slough, [illegible] on the bank of which we were standing, and started swimming and wading across. The stream was about thirty feet across and about ten feet deep at its greatest depth. I was half way across before the men could reload and began firing at me.

"There were several logs in the slough, and the men could not see me very well, for although it was moonlight the stream was darkened by overhanging trees. Possibly three hundred shots were fired and he was covered with mud.

"There critters is cowards," said Mrs
